Aid Dropped By Hopkins On 'Political Fund' Charge

George H. Gannon, Chief of Washington WPA, Is Dismissed.

Says He Resigned Effective June 1

Declines to Discuss Claim He Solicited $3,000 From Staff.

By Sidney Olson.

Charging "obvious political skullduggery," Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday discharged George H. Gannon, Washington State WPA administrator, for collecting funds from his administrative staff for "political purposes."

About $3,000 to $4,000, collected by Gannon, had been returned, he said.

A "half dozen others," not named, will also be "retired to private life," said Hopkins.

Meanwhile, from Seattle came word that Gannon had already announced his resignation, effective June 1, at a Jefferson Day banquet last Monday night in Tacoma, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Gannon, who said: "As far as I am concerned, I'll just let Mr. Hopkins' statement stand. I have no further comment," added that he had accepted the position for only one year and the period would be up at that time, June 1.

Successor Is Selected.

Hopkins, who has repeatedly served notice that he will not tolerate political activities in the WPA, told reporters at his press conference yesterday that he had appointed R. C. Jacobsen, field representative for Western territory headquarters at San Francisco, Calif., as acting administrator to take over Washington work relief.

The telegram sent by Hopkins to Gannon yesterday follows:

"George H. Gannon:

"As a result of conclusive evidence secured in the investigation of political activity and collection of funds in your administration for political purposes, I am today relieving you of the responsibility as Works Progress Admnistrator for the State of Washington. Am appointing R. C. Jacobsen, field representative for the Western territory, as acting administrator to take charge today. I am also instructing Jacobsen to immediately discharge from the WPA administrative pay roll all those employes implicated in this political activity.

(Signed), Harry L. Hopkins."

Gannon, formerly cashier of a bank at Pullman, Wash., was elected to the State Legislature as a Democrat two years ago. He was appointed to his WPA post last summer.

On a recent trip Gannon made to Washington, a raise in pay which he had granted WPA workers in some districts through the State were canceled.

News to State Chairman.

George E. Starr, Democratic State chairman, said in Seattle yesterday: "It is entirely news to me that Gannon has been discharged. I know nothing about any solicitation of funds from employes on the WPA administrative staff for political purposes."

Jay N. Emerson, Republican State chairman, said he didn't believe Gannon had anything to do with such fund solicitation. He said: "If they occurred, he didn't know anything about it."

Hopkins, commenting on the investigation which culminated in Gannon's discharge, said "Our own people in WPA ran it down * * * Remember, we get substantially more political kicks about WPA from Democrats than Republicans."

New Allotments Made.

During the day Hopkins also announced allotments of $5,765,556 out of the $25,000,000 WPA flood rehabilitation fund, for projects in six States.

The grants: West Virginia, $476,052; Virginia, $89,443; Connecticut, $2,831,357; Maine, $1,412,277; Pennsylvania, $523,208, and Massachusetts, $733,219.

Grade crossing at Rockville, Md., where 14 children were killed a year ago, as it appeared yesterday.

Rockville Grade Crossing Still Not Eliminated Year After Tragedy; $200,000,000 U. S. Work Program Lags Over Nation.

By Felix Bruner.

One year ago this month 14 high school students were killed when a bus in which they were riding was struck by a train at a grade crossing at Rockville, Md.

Three days before the accident President Roosevelt had signed a bill appropriating $4,880,000,000 for work relief.

Two days after the accident President Roosevelt announced that the Administration was embarking on a huge grade crossing elimination campaign to make such tragedies impossible. The program was to be financed from the relief money.

1,650 Fatalaties in Year.

Yesterday the Accident Prevention Conference, organized by the Commerce Department, announced that 1,650 persons had been killed in crossing accidents during 1935, the largest number for a period of three years.

Yesterday the Bureau of Public Roads of the Agriculture Department was unable to point to a single crossing that had been eliminated since the Rockville accident. There may have been some, but it was explained that the figures were not available and that the number eliminated probably was "relatively few."

The Rockville grade crossing stands exactly as it did when the 14 boys and girls lost their lives. Not only did President Roosevelt promise a crossing elimination campaign, but Gov. Nice, of Maryland, promised that this particular crossing would be removed.

Recently, Maryland officials, after a year of consideration, announced that a contract for elimination of the crossing would be awarded soon.

The President Dedicates New Interior Office

5,000 Watch as He Wields Trowel, Urges Policy of Conservation.

Dedicating the $12,000,000 structure to continued national policy of resources conservation, President Roosevelt yesterday laid the cornerstone of the new Interior Department Building.

Surrounded by a galaxy of New Dealers, silk-hatted diplomats, members of Congress and the judiciary, and everyday citizens, aggregating about 5,000, the President stressed the arts of peace and production as opposed to war and armaments before wielding the trowel used by George Washington when the Capitol cornerstone was laid in 1793.

He followed, on the speaking rostrum, Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, who lambasted "stupid waste" of natural resources and called upon Congress to enact the pending bill which would change the name of the Department of Interior to Department of Conservation.

"A nation less bountifully endowed than ours, without a national policy of conservation, would have ceased to exist long ago," Mr. Roosevelt said, continuing:

"The remarkable thing was that the people of the United States were so complacent for so long in the face of exploitation, waste and mismanagement, yes, even larceny of the natural wealth that belonged to all the people."

He pointed to Theodore Roosevelt as one of the first to cry out against squandering the Nation's vast domain.

"Supported by an awakened country," said the President, "which by now is beginning to realize the truth of the old warnings, we of this Administration have devoted our thoughts and energies to the conservation of our God-given wealth. Employing every agency of government at hand to protect our birthright we have in the past

Cut Up Over Love, Cupid Uses Knife

Cupid went into action yesterday, not with an arrow, but with a knife. And it was all for love.

That, honestly, is the way he is booked at the First Precinct Station—Cupid Handy, 24, of Arlington, Va. Police said Handy, a diminutive individual, slashed Robert Curtis, 25, of Richmond, who seized the knife and slashed back.

The brawl, said to have started over a young woman, was staged in front of The Post Building. After police interfered, both men were taken to Emergency Hospital, where Cupid was treated for a cut on the face and a stab in the back. Curtis was treated for cuts over the eye and on the temple.

Traffic Policeman Odes White later took them to the police station and charged them with assault on each other. Both are transients.

Roosevelt Host To 150 Editors At White House

Gives an Informal Smoker; Policies Scored During Earlier Meeting.

President Roosevelt was host last night to the editors of approximately 150 newspapers, who are here for the fourteenth convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

The editors went to the informal White House smoker with a list of 25 qusetions. These and the President's replies were not made public. It was an "off the record" exchange.

Earlier in the day, at the opening of the society's meeting in the auditorium of the National Press Club, Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade and president of the society, referred to a "national administration policy which is far less concerned with the freedom of the press than an American Government should be."

Discussing the conduct of the Black lobby committee, Patterson said:

"Not only is the freedom of the press affected, but the ordinary rights of American citizens, long guaranteed under the Constitution, are ignored by the indefensible, dictatorial methods of the Black senatorial committee in seizing private messages and telegrams. * * *

"We shall set down this last attempted invasion as merely a concomitant of just one more purposeless, useless, resultless, sadistic, exhibitionistic demonstration in the elaborate investigation of something or other that produces neither illuminating information, nor human betterment."

Commenting on the refusal of a judge of the District Supreme Court to interfere with the Black committee's seizure of telegrams, the Toledo editor said:

"I agree with Elisha Hanson, whom I regard as particularly competent to define the freedom of the press, that if the court is right in saying it has no jurisdiction over the Senate, then the Senate can invade the rights of the people un-

Cold Winds Bring Topcoat Weather; Fair, Cool Today

Washingtonians donned their topcoats again yesterday as the temperature stayed in the middle 50's throughout the day.

The high mark was 57, established at 7:30 a. m., and the low was 54.1 at 6 p. m. A stiff northwest wind danced around street corners, stinging cheeks to an almost autumnal ruddiness.

Today will be fair, and there will be little change in temperature, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Lobby Group Witness Balks At Questions

Committee Faces Task of Finding Money for Attorney.

The Senate Lobby Committee yesterday faced two problems which were giving it considerable concern. They were:

1. What to do about Kurt Grunwald, a witness who refused to answer questions and who plainly displayed the fact that he did not approve the committee's investigation of anti-New Deal agencies.

2. Where to get the money to pay attorney's fees in defending, probably through the Supreme Court, suits brought to prevent seizure of private telegrams.

The first problem was raised by Grunwald himself, who started his testimony by demanding to know what he was being charged with. The second was the result of refusal of the House to approve $10,000 in legal fees to be used, at least in part, to pay Crampton Harris, former law partner of Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee. Harris is defending the committee in suits brought by William Randolph Hearst, publisher.

Grunwald was ordered to appear before the committee again today. Meanwhile, members were studying a transcript of his testimony to determine whether he should be cited for contempt.

With Farmers Council.

Grunwald is connected with the Farmers Independent Council, which has been fighting the AAA.

Grunwald, insisting that, because he had been forced to come all the way from Nebraska, he must be charged with something, declined to be sworn until Black read the Senate resolution authorizing the committee to investigate lobbying.

The committee attempted to learn from Grunwald whom he had seen in South Dakota and Nebraska in campaigning for his organization. He declined to answer on the ground that he "didn't want to get anybody into trouble."

"We wanted farmers with guts," he told the committee.

Black persisted in his demand that he tell the names of persons of whom he had asked support for the council.

Finally, he said:

"I refuse to answer."

Asked whether he remembered the names of the persons, he said that he did.

Questioned on Citizenship.

One of the committee's seized telegrams was shown to Grunwald. It was addressed to Stanley F. Mores, vice president of the council, and contained a request for the names of the heads of Young Republican clubs in South Dakota. It was sent by Grunwald. He said he had not contacted the clubs.

Grunwald told the committee he was born in Russia and had been employed as an agricultural engineer.

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, asked him when he was naturalized.

The witness said he had expected the question and the "we men of foreign birth go through hell sometimes." He produced his naturalization papers.

Meanwhile, the Federal Communications Commission asked the District of Columbia Supreme Court to dismiss the Hearst application for a permanent injunction against seizing the publisher's telegrams. The commission contended that it no longer had such telegrams in its possession.

Son Says President's Health Has Improved

New Orleans, April 16 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt, tall, smiling son of President Roosevelt, said here today that his father was in better physical condition now than when he entered the White House in 1933.

The younger Roosevelt arrived by airplane from the East to join his wife and her mother, Mrs. Joseph Boynton Googins, of Fort Worth, Tex., who motored here from Texas for a pleasure trip.

Ethiopia Rejects Italy's Terms; French, British Near Breach; Drive on Addis Ababa Begins

Capital to Be Occupied Within Three Days, Invaders Say.

Son of Emperor Rumored as King

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 16.—Italy began a 175-mile thrust through the heart of Ethiopia toward Addis Ababa itself today, Rome newspapers reported.

A "flying" motorized column of cheering Askaris, the native warriors who have been the spearpoint of Italy's drive over the formidable natural barriers of northern Ethiopia, started the march southward.

The reports said the troops, who occupied the strategic city of Dessye yesterday without a shot being fired, would be in Addis Ababa within three days.

Convoyed by tanks and airplanes scouting overhead, hundreds of trucks took the road that leads to the capital city of Emperor Haile Selassie, the newspapers joyously announced.

Major natural obstacles, which made the advance from Eritrea a slow and tortuous one, lie behind. The 175-mile road to Addis Ababa from Dessye was said to be passable by trucks even in the rainy season.

Soldiers Cheer.

Italian correspondents said the soldiers cheered and waved their rifles as they started the journey. Dessye was occupied by 18,000 Askaris yesterday.

Another column, it was disclosed, simultaneously may move to the southeast in an attempt to trap the important southern Ethiopian army at Harar under the command of Ras Nasibu.

Italians hoped he might be squeezed between the northern troops and the southern army under Gen. Rodolfo Graziani.

While Fascists held joyous celebrations here, the authoritative writer, Virginio Gayda, warned in the newspaper Giornale D'Italia that a "devastating European war" would accompany any effort to destroy Italy.

"Italy is determined not to provoke any nation, but will repulse even with weapons in hand, a provocation or menace from whatever direction, even from England," Gayda said.

Italian dispatches said Crown Prince Asfa Wosan, Haile Selassie's young son, weeping, left Dessye with 1,000 men just before the Italians arrived.

May Be Puppet Ruler.

There were Italian rumors that he had decided to go over to the Italian side and would be chosen as a "puppet" ruler for Ethiopia. (A dispatch to the Associated Press from Asmara said the prince evidently realized the futility of making a stand because of the overwhelming numbers against him.)

Military sources here said it was probable the Italians would be in Addis Ababa in time to add to the celebration April 21 of the traditional birthday of Rome.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the African armies, sent this official communique on the entrance to Dessye:

"The occupation of Dessye was accomplished yesterday (Wednesday) by the Eritrean army corps which, under the command of Gen. Biroli, left Quoram April 9 with a spirit of tenacity worthy of the glorious traditions of the native troops and advanced more than 200 kilometers (125 miles) in only six days. The corps was entirely supplied by the air corps.

"Yesterday our first planes landed on the Dessye field.

Britain, Fearing Submarines, Orders 15 Ships to Gibraltar

By the Associated Press.

London, April 16.—Confronted by a new barrage of anti-British editorial attacks in Rome and increasing uncertainties in Geneva, the British admiralty took additional precautions tonight in the Mediterranean.

Sir Bolten Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, disclosed 15 especially designed ships classified as mine-sweeping trawlers, a new, secret type of anti-submarine work, have reached Gibraltar from England in the past week.

This brought the total of the grand fleet in the Mediterranean to its peak since Italo-Ethiopian troubles became acute last August.

At the same time Anglo-French and Belgian military staff talks over Rhineland preparedness were suddenly concluded here. Diplomats expressed belief the developments reflected a more serious turn had been taken in the Italian situation.

They took comfort, however, in official declarations that Britain would not apply military sanctions against Rome and would take no single-handed action which might turn the current crisis into war.

(Rome dispatches reported the inspired press had resumed publishing anti-British editorials. Virginio Gayda, informed writer, warned today that any move to "destroy Italy" would result in a European war and said Italy was prepared, if necessary, to resort to arms "even against England.")

SIR BOLTEN EYRES-MONSELL.

Naval observers estimated there are now 190 British warships in and near the Mediterranean, although the tonnage is probably slightly less

Reds, Fascists Clash in Madrid During Funeral

3 Slain and 50 Wounded; Police and Red Cross Are Mobilized.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, April 16.—Police and first aid units in the Spanish capital prepared for emergency service tonight after a gun battle between Fascists and Communists, in which 3 died and at least 50 were wounded.

Protected in a heavily guarded chamber, the Cortes gave the government a vote of confidence after a bitter debate on its policies in maintaining public order. The vote was 195 to 78.

The crack of pistol fire from the partly constructed ministerial buildings on Castellana avenue opened the bloody fight and interrupted the funeral procession of Lieut. Anastasio Reyes, of the civil guard, killed in a demonstration Tuesday.

The dead are Andre Saenz de Heredi, a cousin of Jose Antonio Primo de Rivera, leader of the Fascist movement, and two other Fascist mourners.

A fourth Fascist was reported so seriously wounded he was not expected to live more than a few hours.

Marching members of the cortege asserted Communists employed in construction of the new buildings opened fire. One marcher asserted the attackers used automatic rapid-fire pistols.

Guerra Del Rio, another of the mourners, said at least 50 were wounded in the battle which ensued when the marchers returned the fire from their political opponents. The official report of the department of public safety set the number wounded at 40.

After the pitched battle, rumors of a general strike accompanied by terrorism alarmed the capital. Red Cross units were ordered to stand by for emergency service. A guard was rushed to the Parliament buildings and others stationed at the famous Puerta Del Sol, where disorders frequently center.

After the first burst of gunfire, mounted police charged into the fray. They swept the streets of the battling forces amid the insults of Extremists. A man with a bomb was reported by Rightists to have been arrested at one intersectioin.

The immediate cause of the outbreak, officials believe, were shouts of "Long Live Fascism!" from civilian marchers in the funeral procession.

Venice Is Flooded: And That Is News!

Venice, April 16 (AP).—Venice, famous for its canals and gondolas, became an actual lake tonight as a strong south wind pushed the tide back to a height of more than 2 feet in the San Marco Piazza and every street in the city.

The water began to flow over the streets in the afternoon until it caused the greatest inundation in the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

Electric plants were flooded and the city was thrust into darkness. Office workers and shoppers saw the water beginning to seep over the embankments and fled into buildings for protection.

20 Are Killed, Scores Injured In Polish Riot

3,000 Jobless Barricaded, Battle Police in Lwow Through Night.

By the United Press.

Warsaw, April 16.—Twenty were reported killed and scores injured today in a pitched battle which still was raging in the streets of the industrial town of Lwow.

Casualties were listed on both sides—police and unemployed demonstrators.

For hours 3,000 unemployed men and women had been barricaded in the center of Legion street, the city's principal thoroughfare. They were heavily armed. Repeated police assaults failed to dislodge them.

Fighting started when the police attempted to disperse unemployed demonstrating in connection with the funeral services of two workers killed during riots last Tuesday.

Latest reports said the demonstrators overturned street cars and used the wrecks to build barricades in the center of the city. Communication with Lwow was crippled.

The Lwow garrison was summoned, but at a late hour it had not gone into action against the beleaguered demonstrators. The troops occupied public buildings as a precautionary measure, however.

A national broadcast at 9 p. m. blamed Communists for precipitating the hostilities. Reds were charged with planning the demonstrations and with supplying arms to unemployed radicals.

The ministry of the interior here announced the police are "masters of the situation" at Lwow after six hours of fighting, but sniping continued in the darkness of Legion street and the demonstrators remained behind their barricades.

Officials feared reports of casualties thus far received are conservative.

Future Veterans Sorry; They Need Bonus to Play On

The Veterans of Future Wars, from their stronghold at Princeton University, last night telegraphed Victory Post No. 4, of the local department of the American Legion, that they could not accept the invitation to an "open house" here the night of April 28.

"Unfortunately," said the telegram, "pressure of real business prevents acceptance of any purely social engagements. When we get our bonus we can play, too."

Representatives of Victory Post, commenting on the telegram, said: "The Veterans of Future Wars can dish it out, but they can't take it. We still hope the little boys from Princeton will come down here and see some real soldiers."

Elaborate plans had been made for the entertainment of the Veterans of Future Wars by Victory Post. Free parking space, it was announced, would be provided for kiddy-cars and scooters, but the post said it would not be responsible for lost coonskin coats.

The program was to consist of the reading of fairy tales and bedtime stories, the playing of tiddledywinks, the singing by Mlle. Bar le Duc of "I Did Not Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," and the distribution of lollypops and other refreshments.

Crisis Comes to Head as Committee of 13 Reconvenes Today.

Fascists 'Bargain,' Selassie Charges

The Crisis Abroad.

Ethiopia yesterday rejected an Italian plan to negotiate peace outside the League of Nations on the basis of victor and vanquished and by its action brought the tension in Europe nearer to the breaking point.

War fears mounted as a showdown between France and England appeared certain at Geneva today.

In the face of the delicate League of Nations situation and renewed attacks in the Italian press, Great Britain moved swiftly to strengthen her naval forces in the Mediterranean.

Military general staff talks in London by Britain, Belgium and France were concluded suddenly.

France, sympathetic with Rome, was prepared to demand that Italy be given more time to consider peace proposals and to fight against any British effort to tighten sanction screws.

In Africa, Roman legions began a 175-mile thrust to Addis Ababa to complete the conquest of Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom.

Meanwhile riots in Spain and Poland, in which casualties ran into the hundreds, reflected the tension which blankets all of Europe. Communists were blamed.

Ethiopia Rejects Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, April 16.—The bitter Italo-Ethiopian crisis, fanning friction among the great powers of Europe, was expected tonight to come to a head tomorrow.

The way was paved for a showdown when Ethiopia, despite reports of impressive Italian military triumphs, flatly rejected Rome's peace terms and demanded that the League employ all possible sanctions against the nation it indicted as an aggressor.

It is within the League's power to employ military sanctions, but virtually every member is against this.

Italy, authoritative sources said, demanded of the League that she be empowered to conduct direct negotiations with Ethiopia for settlement of the war with the only League role that of an observer. Settlement would be on a victor-vanquished basis.

In refusing the Italian proposals, the government of Emperor Haile Selassie told the League:

"We reject and continue to reject these proposals. If we accepted them it would create a serious precedent and mean that smaller states would have no security."

Bargaining Charged.

Ethiopia accused Italy of trying to make a bargain out of the situation with the idea of getting sanctions lifted and her own peace terms in Africa, in return for her help in Europe in case of any difficulties (with Germany).

The Committee of Thirteen of the League Council, after struggling secretly for two hours with the peace problem, was unable to find an answer to the question of whether peace is possible within the framework of the League.

Despite this, the committee refused to abandon hope and called another meeting tomorrow. Its chairman, Salvador de Madariaga, of Spain, was instructed meanwhile to continue negotiations with the Italians and Ethiopians.

Various members of the committee were plainly worried lest Italy succeed in imposing a peace on Ethiopia which would be a discredit to the League.

British View.

The British view is that it would be clearly impossible for the League to force Ethiopia into direct negotiations with Italy if she is determined—as she has repeatedly said—to negotiate only through the League.

There were conflicting versions of what Italy meant by "direct negotiations" with Ethiopia.

The French version was that Italy is willing to keep the League informed during the whole course of

Rats Facing Nervous Jitters So Science Can Study Cause

By the United Press.

Minneapolis, April 16.—Professors of the University of Minnesota are trying to give rats a nervous breakdown. They think that if they are successful they can ascertain the causes and possibly a better treatment of similar breakdowns in human beings.

Assistant Prof. Stuart Cook announced today a series of experiments which will determine just what it takes to make a rat have a nervous breakdown. Whether he succeeds, life for the next few weeks is going to be very complicated for the rodents selected for the experiments.

First of all, the rats will be required to walk across an electrically-charged plate to reach their food. The rats can decide whether they want to take a jolt or go hungry.

Next, the rats will be placed on one of two plates with a gap in between. When they get used to that, they will be given a shock and persuaded to jump to the other plate. As soon as they get used to that, they will be given another shock, and be encouraged to jump back to the first plate.

After this series is completed, the rats will be placed in a compartment. There they will learn that a flashing light always precedes a shock. If they learn fast enough, they soon will know that if they jump when the light flashes they can escape the shock that is sure to follow.

Then, when all the rats learn to jump as soon as the light flashes, another light will be turned on. This will warn them to stay put. If they jump, there will be another and much stronger shock awaiting them. It will be a case of standing still and getting one shock, or jumping and getting a more terrific one.

Prof. Cook believes that by this time the rats will be thoroughly befuddled. Their nerves either will be shattered or at the breaking point. He believes that at this stage a human being would be ready for the strait jacket.

At that point the rats will be put back where they started, in the food cage. There they can decide whether they want to cross the electrified plate and get shocked, or go hungry. By watching the rats' reactions, Prof. Cook believes he can learn something regarding human behavior in the face of bewildering and confusing situations which lead to breakdowns.

New Tax Bill Would 'Freeze' Business Debts

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's constantly shifting revenue program yesterday underwent another major operation in the Ways and Means tax subcommittee, which drastically modified earlier provisions for relieving debt-ridden corporations and blocked attempts at tax evasion through stock dividends.

"Freezing" all corporate debts as of March 3, 1936, the latest change will require all corporations next year to file with the Treasury a complete statement not only of earnings and profits, but of indebtedness as well, constituting one of the bulkiest tax returns in corporate tax history.

Under the earlier proposal for relief of debt-burdened companies, a corporation whose debts exceeded its earnings could pay a flat rate of 22½ per cent on any portion of earnings used to defray debts outstanding.

Under the new provision agreed to yesterday, no company could claim credit for paying off all of its debt in one year, but instead would have to spread such credits over a period of five years or longer. Once allowed the credit, the concern would not be forced to actually use the money for debt payment. If it so desired, it could spend it, instead, on expansion of its plant.

Hill Shows How It Works.

Announcing the change, Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the sub-committee, said it was primarily an effort at "simplification," but might result in some increased revenue in the first year.

Illustrating how it would work, he took the case of a corporation having $100,000 in indebtedness, but with earnings and profits of $50,000. Deducting the earnings from the outstanding debt would leave $50,000, on which the corporation could claim a debt credit.

This firm would be allowed to fix the maximum number of years over which it intended to make payments from earnings on the $50,000 debt, but in no case could they fix less than five years. Assuming the company agreed to the five-year arrangement, namely, to liquidate its debt in five years, it could pay the preferred 22½ tax rate on $10,000 in each of the five years, leaving the balance of earnings subject to the steeply graduated corporate earnings tax.

The bill, as reviewed yesterday, definitely specified that the debt-laden corporation must determine at the time of their next year's tax returns the period of years over which they intend to defray their debt, in order to claim the debt credit.

The only other significant action taken yesterday by the sub-committee was to plug an outstanding tax-evasion loophole resulting from corporate payment of dividends in stock—a step recently predicted by Chairman Hill in an interview with The Post.

All Unpaid Earnings Face Tax.

As rewritten, the bill will state that if stock dividends or stock rights paid out by a corporation are nontaxable dividends in the hands of shareholders no dividend credit will be allowed the corporation.

The graduated corporate earnings tax as originally drafted provided for taxation of earnings in proportion to dividends withheld from stockholders. Thus, if a corporation paid out all its earnings in dividends it would not be taxed; on the other hand, if it retained all its earnings it would be fully taxed. The impression was received during recent hearings that a corporation could elect to pay dividends in stock, in lieu of cash, and thus avoid tax. Action taken yesterday would prevent such evasion.

The changes were voted as the sub-committee received its first rough draft of the new tax bill, comprising 230 printed pages, and combining the proposed 1936 revenue program with continued provisions of the 1934 and 1935 revenue acts.

Conservative Democrats and a militant Republican minority were preparing to contest the Administration proposals when the bill reaches the floor, probably late next week, but there appeared little likelihood that they will be able to upset it.

Republicans were having difficulty agreeing on a united plan of counter-action after differences developed over a tentative agreement reached last week on a threefold program, embracing curtailed expenditures, excise taxes on certain imported farm commodities and a corporation income tax increase to no more than 22½ per cent.

Although the minority's plan is still in a state of flux, it was said that strong pressure is being brought to limit the minority report to purely an expression in favor of reducing expenditures in the amount of new revenues sought. There is a possibility that a Republican House conference may be called before differences are ironed out.

Treadway Favors Reductions.

Representative Allen T. Treadway, Massachusetts, ranking minority member, is known to favor taking a strong stand in favor of reduced expenditures, and largely limiting the report to this.

It is well known that Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, another minority member, in addition to recommending spending cuts, would like to impose protective excises on foreign farm commodities coming into this country in sufficient volume to depress domestic prices.

Although Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee received a copy of the House sub-committee's rough tax bill draft yesterday, it is not expected he will open Senate hearings until the full Ways and Means Committee agrees on a bill. The measure will be brought into the House under an open rule, that will not "gag" debate, but floor consideration probably will run through five days, extending through the end of April and possibly into May.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH carried Illinois, but lost Chicago; Col. Frank Knox carried Chicago and will get a majority of Illinois' delegates to the Republican convention; the Idahoan received the bulk of the Republican vote in Nebraska's preferential primary—

WALTMAN

But Gov. Alf M. Landon won in both Illinois and Nebraska!

Such are the vagaries of national politics this year. It is the reason why the ordinary citizen, more interested in earning a living than in following political developments, finds that the Republican situation this time is so much Greek to him. But that is the way it works out, in the opinion of the professional political observers.

Take the Illinois result, for example. Gov. Landon's name was not entered in that primary, nor did it figure in the outcome as the result of a "write-in" campaign, as it did in Nebraska. Nevertheless, the outcome has enhanced his standing and brought him closer to the Republican Presidential nomination.

The reason is that two of his opponents butted their heads together and each came off with a headache. Senator Borah made a splendid showing. Without any organization support, without spending any money against a ticket which had sufficient funds for its needs, the Idahoan rolled up a most creditable vote for himself, actually carrying most of downstate Illinois and capturing more delegates than many believed possible.

But—and it is a BUT that counts—Senator Borah came off second in the contest. He was unable to demonstrate his ability to carry an important, perhaps pivotal, Middle Western State, chiefly because his background is such that he did not appeal to the voters of a large city.

And, while Col. Knox finished first, he was somewhat winded at the end of the race. His followers cannot, if they are realistic, be proud of his achievement. With a large newspaper as a mouthpiece, with virtually the entire Illinois Republican organization pledged to him, with the most elaborate campaign organization of any of the Presidential aspirants and running in his own State, Col. Knox failed to demonstrate that the electorate is either enthusiastic about him or panting for a chance to put him in the White House.

Thus the result was exactly what the Landon managers anticipated it would be—that Knox and Borah would hurt each other and that the Republican leaders who will decide the issue at Cleveland will look around for a candidate without scars.

In Nebraska, Senator Borah was the only Republican entered on the ballots. Yet more than 12,000 Republican voters went to the trouble of writing in Gov. Landon's name on the ballot, giving him a vote about one-fifth of that for the Idahoan.

Further evidence that Senator Borah stirred no enthusiasm in Nebraska is found in the fact that his vote was only about one-half of that cast for Republican gubernatorial candidates. The Borah preferential vote there is not binding on the delegates, anyway, and it is common knowledge that most of the group selected intend to support Gov. Landon at Cleveland.

The failure of a carefully planned campaign to have Republicans "write-in" the name of Senator George W. Norris for renomination may indicate that that grand old man of the Senate has become a prophet without honor at home. For many years now, Senator Norris has gone through the pretense of being coaxed to run for re-election and it may be that pitcher has gone to the well once too often.

This view finds substantiation in the defeat of State Democratic Chairman J. C. Quigley, who campaigned for his party's senatorial nomination with the avowed purpose of retiring in favor of Senator Norris should the latter run as an independent.

And it also is supported by the victory of Senator Edward R. Burke in his race for Democratic national committeeman. Senator Burke, who has opposed some New Deal measures, made the race on the issue of testing public opinion among Nebraskans to determine whether it was in harmony with his actions.

Still, one cannot be sure whether Senator Norris has lost his grip on Nebraska. The nomination by the Democrats of former Representative Terry Carpenter for the Senate may aid the Norris cause. Mr. Carpenter is labeled a Townsendite and he has been sympathetic to that cause. Already Senator Burke has declared that he cannot support the nominee, but will vote for Senator Norris should he run as an independent.

On the other hand, the Carpenter candidacy, if he fights for election, may have the effect of splitting Nebraska's left-wing Democrats and Republicans between himself and Senator Norris, while the conservatives of both parties may support Robert G. Simmons, the Republican nominee, thus electing him.

Apropos of the Democratic youth meeting in Baltimore the other night when President Roosevelt was preceded into the city by regular Army troops, one of the trappings of Fascism was missing. The youths did not salute Mr. Roosevelt when he mounted the platform. Perhaps the Democrats had better devise a New Deal salute for such meetings.

May we suggest the salute adopted by those rollicking youths at Princeton University, the Veterans of Future Wars? It consists of the hand held outstretched, with the open palm up, in a gesture of "give me."

'Must' Status For Little NRA Aim of Author

Textile Labor Code Bill Constitutionality Is Insured by Writers.

Plans to have a "little NRA" for the textile industry put on President Roosevelt's "must list" for action before Congress adjourns were revealed yesterday by Representative Henry Ellenbogen (Democrat), Pennsylvania. Ellenbogen, author of the proposed national textile act, declared he would lead a House delegation to confer with the President, and urge the need for speedy action on the measure.

At the same time, Representative William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, announced that he would ask the House Rules Committee to get the bill on the House floor immediately.

The House Labor Committee, of which Connery is chairman, yesterday reported out the Ellenbogen textile measure in considerably revised form. It would provide a five-day week and a seven-hour day for textile workers, although clerical help would be permitted a 40-hour week.

Board to Fix Wages.

While minimum wages are not set in the bill, a board appointed by the President would have the power to fix them, as well as to regulate trade practices and production. Hearings held two months ago on the original Ellenbogen bill brought out bitter criticism from textile manufacturers, while labor union officials and textile workers approved it.

The new measure provides for production control and regulation of trade practices, and enforcement of regulations and would be similar to that employed by the trade commission.

In reporting the previous favorable action of a Labor sub-committee, Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, said:

"The bill we are reporting is so in keeping with the President's speech Monday night in Baltimore that I am hoping it may receive at least favorable consideration of the Administration forces."

Connery, in announcing the committee had approved the bill, said: "Mill owners have been crying for years for a national uniform hour law. I do not see how they could be in a position to oppose this bill."

Set up under the measure would be a "consumers counsel" with the same functions for the textile industry as the consumers counsel exercised under NRA.

The bill sets out a list of unfair trade practices over which the textile board would have jurisdiction. These include destructive competition, misleading advertising, misbranding and mislabeling, imitation of a competitor's product, bribing an employe, breach of contract, overproduction, price discrimination, exclusive dealing, and conspiracy to violate any of the provisions of the act.

Whenever the commission has reason to believe any of the fair trade practices are being violated, or employes are being treated unfairly, the bill provides that the commission may take the case before the Federal Trade Commission for prosecution. But this proceeding is to be exercised only after the textile commission has conducted exhaustive hearings on the question.

The commission would be empowered to issue distinctive insignia, as was the case with the NRA and the Blue Eagle. Only manufacturing firms complying with commission regulations would be permitted to display the insignia, and unlawful display would be a prosecutable offence.

Constitutionality Insured.

Drafters of the bill took pains to insure its constitutionality. In a "finding of policy," the bill declares that textile products and their sale, transportation and distribution throughout the United States are affected with a national public interest. Further, the bill states that "distribution of textile products throughout all the States and numerous foreign countries constitute a material and substantial part of the commerce among the several States and with foreign countries.

Having established that the textile industry is interstate in character, and subject to Federal regulation, the bill declares:

"It is the unqualified intent of the Congress that the provisions of this act shall be regarded as separable, and that no provision or any application thereof shall be held invalid because of the invalidity of any other provision or any other application thereof.

"If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected. If any provision of this act or any regulation is held invalid by reason of insufficient standards, improper delegation of legislative authority, or any interpretation of this act, the commission shall forthwith transmit such regulation or provision to Congress, together with its recommendations for the ratification of such regulation by appropriate legislation, or for amendment of such provision."

Two members opposed it as being unconstitutional, voting against reporting it to the House. They were Representatives Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, and Hartley (Republican), New Jersey.

Social Agency Promises Help In Farm Strike

Arkansas Agricultural Unit Demands Landlords Reorganize Union.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the National Committee on Rural Social Planning yesterday disclosed plans for providing financial aid and other assistance for a strike of tenant farmers in three Arkansas counties before mid-July.

Gardner Jackson, chairman of the committee, asserted several thousand tenant farmers will be called to walk out in the midst of "cotton shopping time" when large numbers of laborers are needed for work in the fields.

At present, if is planned to confine the strike to Cross, Crittenden and St. Francis Counties in northeastern Arkansas, where the Southern Tenant Farmer Union was said to be most firmly entrenched, Jackson said.

If the movement is successful, however, he said it might spread to other areas.

The tenants, he continued, will be asked to strike for recognition of the union by landowners, for higher wages in the cotton fields, and for adoption of a uniform contract between landlords and tenants.

Jackson, once an AAA official, said he hoped that the strike would result in elimination of what he said was discrimination against tenants by the Resettlement Administration and local relief officials.

The national committee, he said, expected to furnish financial assistance to the striking tenants and some leadership. He said he expected to be in Arkansas when the strike was called.

At a conference, sponsored by Jackson's committee, with Government officials here recently, representatives of the tenant farmers charged that Resettlement and relief officials refused aid to the tenants, forcing them to accept starvation wages.

Following the conference, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, urged farmers to work toward building a union.

Decision to call the strike followed a vote taken in the three Arkansas counties several weeks ago, when approximately 6,300 tenant farmers were reported to have favored a strike and about 300 voted in opposition.

German-U. S. Air Route Trial Will Start Soon

Berlin, April 16 (AP).—The German air ministry announced today trial flights for a transatlantic air service between Germany and the United States will be started within a few months.

The service will be routed by way of the Azores Islands, Bermuda, and Charleston, S. C.

Preliminary plans call for planes making the North American flight to halt at a catapult ship midway between the Azores and the Bermudas.

The air ministry said the date on which regular service will begin has not been set.

Monarchists Meet At Royal Wedding

Vienna, April 16 (AP).—A royal wedding party became a monarchist conclave tonight after the marriage of Princess Alice of Bourbon-Parma and Prince Alfonso of Bourbon.

A dozen archdukes and duchesses and other royal figures met together for the first time in years at the Nuptials. Numerous conferences with legitimists seeking to restore Archduke Otto of Hapsburg to the Austrian throne followed the ceremony.

Former King Alfonso of Spain, known in some quarters as "chairman of the committee for restoration of the Hapsburgs," participated in the discussions.

The bride is a niece of former Empress Zita of Austria, Archduke Otto's mother, and the groom a nephew of Alfonso.

Legitimists in the Austrian capital were encouraged by friendly demonstrations toward the bridal pair by large crowds of residents of Vienna.

Two Refused Clemency In Prison Break Plot

San Francisco, April 16 (AP).—Alexander Mackay and Joseph Kristy, sentenced to hang for participation in the fatal San Quentin Prison break last year, were denied clemency by the State Supreme Court today. They are scheduled to be hanged April 24.

Acting British Consul General Cyril H. Cane had interceded in Mackay's behalf on the ground the prisoner was a British subject. However, the high court did not regard this as sufficient ground for reversing the lower court.

Mackay and Kristy, with two other prisoners, kidnaped former Warden James B. Holohan and several prison officials in the futile escape plot.

Police Identify N. Y. Prisoner In Riggs Theft

Official Says Fingerprints Link Suspect in $15,000 Bond Robbery.

As the Justice Department pressed for speedy action against eight men arrested in connection with the theft of $500,000 worth of bonds from a Manhattan bank 16 months ago, heavy bail was fixed yesterday for the suspects under arrest in New York.

The defendants, captured as a successful climax to the Government's 16-month search, were rounded up by Federal agents, who also recovered $310,000 of the bonds stolen from the United States Trust Co. of New York. At least one of them is implicated, authorities feel, in the disappearance of $15,000 in bonds from the Riggs National Bank here seven months ago.

All the defendants were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter in New York.

High Bond Set.

Each was charged with violation of the United States penal code in the transportation of stolen securities in interstate commerce. Over the protests of the defendants, bond for each was fixed, ranging from $10,000 to $40,000, at the request of United States Attorney Lamar Hardy.

Meanwhile, Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives here, announced last night that one of the men under arrest, William R. Evans, had been identified as a participant in the mysterious bond theft from the Riggs National Bank.

At the time $15,000 worth of bonds disappeared from the bank after the teller had put them down inside the window to answer a phone call.

Identification of Evans was made by Inspector Thompson through fingerprints and other data sent him late yesterday from New York.

"We still seek another suspect in the case, and when we catch him, we feel the mystery will be solved," Thompson said.

More Lost Loot Hunted.

The Department of Justice made no statement yesterday as to whether other suspects are sought in the New York robbery. It was understood, however, that search was under way for the rest of the loot.

Besides Evans, the men under arrest in New York are Paul Alexander, who was returned to Manhattan early yesterday after his arrest here some days ago; Charles Hartman, Theodore Crowley, Gabriel Marosi and Earl J. Palmer, all of New York City, and Rocco J. and George DeGrassi, of West Palm Beach, Fla.

The bonds, taken from the New York bank, were in an envelope which had been delivered to a cage of the United States Trust Co. Nine of them were of $10,000 denomination and five of them of $100,000 denomination.

They were removed from the cage in the short time a clerk was absent from his post.

The DeGrassis brothers, arrested in Florida, signed a waiver and were hastened to New York.

Hartman was linked with the case in January of this year, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Investigation Bureau of the Department of Justice, said in a signed memorandum, when a $100,000 bond was found in his possession in New York.

Another bond was found in possession of the DeGrassis brothers in Florida and a third $100,000 certificate was found in the lining of a hat worn by Melvin S. Smith, when he was arrested in Kansas City last summer.

Stranded Ship Afloat; Priceless Art Is Cargo

Gibraltar, April 16 (AP).—The S. S. Ranpura, aground on a sandbar since Tuesday night with a cargo of priceless Chinese art treasures, was refloated tonight.

The vessel ran into difficulty outside Gibraltar Harbor while en route to the Orient to return objects of art lent for a three months' exhibition in London, which closed recently.

So valuable were the ancient items that the British government sent warships along to convoy the Ranpura.

2 Held in Paris In $1,500,000 U. S. Bond Raid

Arrest of Man, Woman Predicted; $440,000 Is Reported Recovered.

By the United Press.

New York, April 16.—Two men are under arrest in Paris in connection with the theft of $1,500,000 in United States Treasury notes in January, 1935, police announced tonight.

Information reaching headquarters here was that the men had been captured with $440,000 worth of the bonds, which were taken away from a Bank of Manhattan messenger.

French police cabled they expected to make two more arrests shortly and that one of the persons would be a woman.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine immediately reported to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, asking him to request the State Department to intervene. The State Department will be asked, it was said, to request French police to detain the men until Detective Henry Oswald can get to France.

Details were vague in the cable sent by French police, but detectives here pieced together a story of robbery and intrigue stretching to Monte Carlo. The names of both men were omitted, nor did the French police hint at the identify of the two other persons who are to be arrested.

Oswald has been receiving mysterious tips for months about the Treasury notes. Some time ago his telephone rang and a voice said: "Would you like to recover some stolen bonds?" Then the caller hung up.

The next day he called again and said:

"If you want those bonds, you will find them in Paris."

Oswald immediately got in touch with French authorities and the investigation that followed resulted in the arrests. The cable said the two men in custody had eight of the original 52 Treasury notes.

The Treasury notes were taken away from George Blossfield, Bank of Manhattan messenger, on January 28, 1935, when he was delivering them to the Wall street office of C. J. Devine.

British Nurse, Mother of Five, Hanged in Birmingham Jail

Anti-Capital Punishment Agitator Broadcasts Appeal to Crowd of 2,000 to Halt Execution of Ninth Woman Since Turn of Century.

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, England, April 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham, 34-year-old mother of five children, died on the gallows of the Winson Green Prison today while police guarded the approach against a demonstration in protest at "this disgrace."

Mrs. Violet van der Elst, energetic campaigner against capital punishment, organized a demonstration, broadcasting appeals to a crowd of 2,000 to attempt to prevent the hanging.

The throng looked on quietly, however, some smiling at Mrs. van der Elst's exhortations, some praying for Mrs. Waddingham while the convicted poison slayer of a patient in her Nottingham nursing home died within the prison.

King Edward himself was the only one who could have saved the woman from the gallows by granting a last-minute reprieve, after Home Secretary Sir John Simon denied appeals for clemency.

A wave of protest throughout Britain over the hanging of the mother of five children, including a 6-month-old baby, was countered by press statements terming the poison death of the 50-year-old patient, Ada Louisa Baguley, a flagrant offense.

Newspapers insisted the crime must have been premediated, and that even the strong recommendation of mercy by the jury which convicted Mrs. Waddingham February 27 should not be allowed to deter the punishment.

A last over-night appeal to the Home Office having been rejected, the nurse was led to the gallows and the trap was sprung shortly after 9 a. m. (4 a. m., E. S. T.), on the ninth woman to be executed in Great Britain since the start of the century.

Mrs. Waddingham was the first woman to pay the extreme penalty in England since Mrs. Ethel Lillie Major was hanged in the grim Hull Prison, December 19, 1934, for the poison-slaying of her husband.

Jeffersonian Tariff Held U. S. Depression Cure

Berlin, April 16 (AP).—William E. Dodd, United States Ambassador to Germany, said tonight that America's failure to carry out low tariff proposals of Thomas Jefferson was responsible for the economic depression.

"If the low tariff ideals of the author of the Declaration of Independence had been maintained, our people might have escaped the two worst depressions in modern history," Dodd declared in an address before the American Chamber of Commerce of Germany.

Gypsy Quins Live Day, Mother May Survive

Bucharest, Rumania, April 16 (AP). Malformed quintuplets born to a gypsy mother in a field lived but a day, authorities at Oradea reported tonight.

Physicians at no time held hope that the babies would live, although they expect the recovery of the 25-year-old mother, Mrs. Maria Ljnguraru.

Coast Guard Resumes Watch on N.Y. Rum Row

New York, April 16 (AP).—Resumption of the prohibition days' practice of searching suspicious vessels entering New York harbor was disclosed today when it was learned that the United States Coast Guard cutter Calumet has been employed in this work by a prohibition unit of the customs service since Monday.

The purpose of the searching is guarded, but it is understood to have begun with the seizure of the freighter Southern Sword several weeks ago. The freighter was suspected of taking alcohol from a ship at sea for landing in this port.

Playwright Assails Roosevelt Policies

Watertown, N. Y., April 6 (AP).—Channing Pollock, playwright, in a talk before the northern New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church here today criticized the Roosevelt Administration as a farce turning the world over to the unfit.

"Behind high altruism, however sincere," Pollock said in reference to the Administration, "functions as shrewd and perhaps as unscrupulous a political machine as our democracy ever has known. There is no lunacy of the lunatic fringe from which it has not borrowed, with which it has not temporized and which it does not propose to unite so that by sheer force of voting numbers all may obtain the substance of what all may desire."

Roosevelt may have determined the true cause of the depression at his inauguration, Pollock said, but "instead, we began running our world for the underdog. The underdog may or may not be the unfit; the forgotten man may or may not have been forgotten because . . . he never did anything worth remembering. The upsetting of the dominance of the people who have obtained dominance may be a move forward of the improvement of civilization or a long leap in the other direction."

Driver Appeals After District Recalls Permit

Motorist Convicted on Speed Charge Seeks U.S. Court Ruling.

Challenging the right of the District Commissioners to revoke, or suspend, drivers' permits in the current traffic campaign, attorneys representing Joseph E. Campbell, whose permit was revoked on conviction of first-offense speeding, yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to review the case.

In a writ of error, filed late yesterday, Attorneys J. Chase McKenzie and William J. Kelly asserted Campbell had been deprived of his constitutional rights when the Commissioners revoked his permit. The charge against him was speeding 54 miles an hour on Key Bridge, for which he was fined $15.

The attorneys claimed the law which enabled the Commissioners "or their agents" to revoke or suspend permits on grounds they deem sufficient is unconstitutional in that it was an unlawful delegation of legislative authority. They cited the famous Schechter case which, in a decision by the Supreme Court, invalidated the NRA.

Campbell had a property right in his permit, it was said, and taking it away from him without a judicial hearing was a violation of the "due process" clause of the Constitution. The District Commissioners and the Board of Revocations and Restorations of Permits were named as defendants. The petition, if acted upon by the Appellate Court, will finally determine the right of the District to suspend permits on speeding charges.

In the meantime the Board of Revocation took up the cases of 25 motorists convicted of speeding. They suspended 22 driving permits and revoked three others.

Those who lost their permits are Truby D. Horton, 930 Quincy, 65 miles; Nathaniel Washington, 2218 Fort place southeast, 50 miles; Cone J. Weeks, 918 Virginia avenue southwest, 52 miles.

Suspensions of 30 days went to Joseph R. Holland, Silver Spring, Md., 45 miles; Charles H. Moore, 436 Tenth street southwest, 48 miles; Clifford Poole, 1349 Thirty-third street northwest, 70 miles; Henry W. Reeder, 516 Concord avenue northwest, 44 miles; Hebe L. Reynolds, 2126 Connecticut avenue northwest, 42 miles; George L. Ridgely, 1249 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 40 miles; Nate Sauber, 647 Massachusetts avenue northeast, 42 miles; Charles Spanos, 1113 Massachusetts avenue northwest, 49 miles; Steve Walsh, 5126 Fulton street northwest, 40 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to Joseph C. Pought, East Falls Church, Va., 36 miles; Walter F. Green, Upper Marlboro, Md., 38 miles; Edith C. Macray, 1722 Nineteenth street northwest, 36 miles; William P. Newman, 58 Quincy street northeast, 35 miles; Robert B. Mullen Files Suit For $49,500 Fees

By the Associated Press.

North Platte, Nebr., April 16.—Arthur F. Mullen, Omaha and Washington attorney, filed suit in District Court today for legal fees of $49,500 which he claimed the Platte Valley Public Power and Irrigation District failed to pay him in 1933, 1934 and 1935.

Mullen, Democratic floor leader for President Roosevelt at the last Democratic National Convention, resigned as counsel for the project a month ago.

Directors of the Platte Valley project approved a bill for Mullen's services but Secretary Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, declared it excessive.

Skunk Falls in Ditch; Sewer Project Delayed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 16.—There was much buck-passing yesterday and several hours lost time in a sewer construction project here, because a skunk fell into a 15-foot ditch and couldn't escape.

Workmen tried to dislodge the animal and got the worst of the argument. A hurry call was sent to the police department, which, being informed of the species of the cat, called in the street department, under the jurisdiction of which the project is being done. The animal was finally killed and work was resumed today.

Boy, Shot With Air Rifle, May Lose Sight of Eye

Joseph Donohue, 11, of 905 G street southeast, may lose the sight of his right eye as a result of being hit with shot from an air rifle by an unidentified boy. His condition was reported improved yesterday at Episcopal Eye, Ear, Throat Hospital.

Joseph was shot last week while playing in an alley near his home. He was first treated at Gallinger Hospital. Physicians said there was little hope of saving the eye.

Mrs. Mary Donohue, the boy's mother, told police the owner of the air rifle was a youth about 17 years old.

Leopold Received Threat Signed 'Gangster,' Demanding $68,000.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, April 16.—Police charged tonight that Nicholas Elsen, 31, a former convict, was the author of letters to King Leopold in which the monarch was threatened with death and his three motherless children with kidnaping.

Elsen, who police said confessed the abduction plot, was held at Liege after an investigation carried on secretly for several weeks.

The plot charged to Elsen began when the King received letters signed "Gangster" demanding 2,000,000 francs (approximately $68,000).

The writer advised King Leopold to leave the money in a wooded section near Liege. Police, advising the ruler to deposit a dummy package, lay in wait for the author of the letters. He did not appear.

Elsen was finally apprehended after officials traced a reference in one of the notes that the writer was a former convict. Elsen was released from prison last year after serving a six-year term for robbery.

Officials declared Elsen probably will be brought to trial in June or July, but will be given a medical examination before the hearing.

Workers' Bill Termed Blow ToRail Mergers

Executives Tell Senators Wheeler Measure Is Too Expensive.

By the Associated Press.

The Wheeler bill to protect employes dislodged by railroad consolidations was attacked by two railroad presidents yesterday.

The executives declared the measure set up such a "rigid" system that the consummation of any economical consolidations would be unlikely.

Carl R. Gray, of Omaha, president of the Union Pacific System, and J. L. Lancaster, of Dallas, president of the Texas & Pacific Railway, told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee the bill would not only delay consolidations, but would discourage railroads from undergoing expansion to reach temporary trade by raising fears that when they chose to withdraw from such traffic they would be unable to do so without great expense.

Following their appearance before the committee, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, asserted the measure was "probably unconstitutional."

The measure, sponsored by the railroad brotherhoods, would require that in event of consolidations, either of two railroads, or of operations within a single system, the displaced employes should be provided for. The employes would have the option under the bill of receiving two-thirds of the regular pay until they were re-employed by the railroad or by some other industry, or of accepting in advance a year's full pay and dismissal.

Gray said he assumed Congress "is going to pass this bill," but urged that first it eliminate "any reference to the internal operations of a single railroad." Efforts at economy within a railroad through elimination of outmoded service, or abandonment of trackage, he said, should not be interfered with under the measure.

As an example of the difficulties he predicted the railroads might face because of the bill, he cited the instance of the oil developments at Ranger, Tex.

Discovery of oil there, he declared, occasioned an expansion of the railroad facilities which lasted only until the oil field was definitely outlined and a pipe line was installed to carry the crude. Immediately, he said, traffic dropped from a peak to a minimum, occasioning reduction of service and employment on the line.

Canada Reports Balance of Exports

Ottawa, April 16 (AP).—Canadian trade jumped ahead in the fiscal year ended in March, it was shown today by the national revenue department. The government closed its books at the year end with an export balance of $202,720,269.

Exports of Canadian products in the 12-month period totaled $765,663,032 and imports, $562,942,763. In the year ended March 31, 1935, exports were valued at $659,899,994, and imports $522,416,844. A breakdown of imports showed slightly less than half entered Canada free—$252,995,921. Dutiable goods had a value of $309,946,842.

2 British Hikers Cross Italian Border, Seized

Nice, France, April 16 (AP).—Two English tourists were reported held at the Italian frontier post of Ventimiglia tonight after mistakenly crossing the border while hiking without passports.

The pair, whose names were given as Richard Johnston, 53, and Martin Trivett, 16, both of Portsmouth, left Mentone five days ago, said a report to the British consulate.

When they failed to return to the hotel where they left their baggage and passports a search was made. The hotel was advised that they had unwittingly crossed the frontier.

Too Many Buttons Calls Guards to Texas Capitol

Austin, Tex., April 16 (AP).—Spectators ducked for cover today as a squad of safety department operatives armed with sub-machine guns, shotguns, rifles and pistols dashed into the capitol and headed into the treasury office. Witnesses were disappointed when they failed to hear the battle of machine gun fire and the boom of .45s.

An employe working in a new underground treasury vault accidentally set off the alarm in trying to manipulate the automatic electrical controls that operate the heavy doors. In desperation he puled all the buttons. One was the burglar alarm.

Tell of Escape From Drowning

DAVID KIRBY.

ROBERT BROWN.

2 Boys Escape Death in River After Boat Capsizes in Squall

Washington Students Swim to Island Haven as Spectators Watch, Unable to Launch Rescue Craft; Accident Climaxes Vacation

How their Easter vacation was climaxed by a desperate 45-minute battle with the raging waves of the Potomac River near St. Georges Island, Md., was related yesterday by David Kirby and Robert Brown, two 19-year-old Bethesda youths.

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Kirby, of 5505 Edgemore lane, and Robert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown, of 407 Wilson lane. Their fathers are officials of the United States Public Health Service.

Wednesday the two youths were sailing near their parents' cottages on Piney Point. A sudden squall capsized their boat. For three-quarters of an hour they fought the rough, icy waters to swim half a mile to St. George's Island.

They came ashore without clothes and broke into an unoccupied cabin to secure blankets. Seeing their footprints, Allen Poe, an oysterman, trailed them, supplied them with clothing and helped them return to their parents' summer homes.

But Poe was only one of several persons on the island who saw the valiant battle against the river. Others watched helplessly, unable to launch a rescue boat because of the high waves and the wind.

"Things began to get very black and it was awfully cold," Brown, a senior at Western High School, recalled last night.

"I kept thinking about my people," recollected Kirby, a freshman at George Washington University.

Kiwanians Hear Nice at Banquet

Speaking at a dinner of the Prince Georges County Kiwanis Club at Beaver Dam Country Club last night, Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, said he would like to convince the people of Maryland that he intends to continue to function in the interest of the people of Maryland during the remainder of his term.

Nice was introduced by John S. White, president of the club and Democratic member of the Maryland Legislature. White expressed the hope that Nice would win the Republican Presidential nomination at the Cleveland convention.

The main address was given by the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation in Washington. Mr. Blackwelder attributed the fine relations between the United States and Canada to the activities of the Kiwanis Club.

Gavels were presented by Edwin F. Hill, international trustee of the Kiwanians, to Dr. Mark Welch, of College Park, and Dr. John T. Maloney, of Cheverly, former president of the club.

Senators to Seek Rail Inquiry Fund

By the Associated Press.

The Senate committee which for nearly a year has been quietly investigating railroad financing is preparing to ask for $100,000 to carry its inquiry through to the next session of Congress.

Headed by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, the committee has secretly gathered information since the last session of Congress, but has not yet held hearings.

The original appropriation of $25,000 granted by the Senate is running low and many months of work remain to be done. Wheeler said that at least $100,000 more would be needed.

While no word has come from members about the findings, the committee was recently informed by the staff there was plenty of material available for hearings. The Senators decided they were too busy now with other things to begin the long hearings.

$440,000,000 Road Program Passes House

Farm-to-Market Highways, Crossing Elimination to Receive Funds.

The House yesterday gave swift approval to a $440,000,000 two-year road-building program, extending the old Hayden-Cartwright Federal aid act, and authorizing funds for the first time for farm-to-market roads and grade-crossing elimination.

The bill, which is purely an authorizing measure and does not actually appropriate funds, was approved with virtually no opposition and sent immediately to the Senate for action.

Under its terms, the money would not actually be spent until the fiscal years ending June 30, 1938, and June 30, 1939. Not previously included in highway aid legislation were two new projects—a $50,000,000 two-year authorization for farm-to-market roads to be matched on a 50-50 basis by the States, and $100,000,000 during the two-year period for grade-crossing elimination.

Additional Funds.

Additional funds made available on a two-year basis were as follows:

For the usual Federal highway aid, on a 50-50 matching basis with the States—$250,000,000.

For forest roads and trails—$20,000,000.

For trails and roads in public lands—$5,000,000.

For national park roads—$15,000,000.

An unsuccessful fight to permit States to receive Federal road aid without matching the amount put up by the Government was lead by Representative John L. McClellan (Democrat), of Arkansas, who claimed his own State could not share in the plan otherwise, due to high taxation already imposed to fianance road building.

Likewise, Representative Compton White (Democrat), Idaho, led an effort to increase the allotment for forest roads to $30,000,000 for the two years, insisting $20,000,000 would only provide for the existing park system.

Amendment Stricken.

On a point of order, an amendment by the co-author of the bill, Representative Wilburn Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, requiring use of only materials and equipment made in the United States was stricken from the bill.

In support of funds for farm-to-market roads, included in the bill, Representative William M. Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, said the United States "is still in the pioneer days when it comes to construction of secondary or feeder roads."

"The highway program for the next fiscal year is not directly involved in this bill, but the sound, economical planning of road building is a long-range task," said Cartwright. "Construction programs for 1937 will be affected by action on this bill, because this action will tell the States whether they can operate under a stabilized three-year program or whether they must lay out their construction schedule on a one-year basis."

Elkton Meeting Planned.

Elkton, Va., April 16.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Skyline Shenandoah Scenic Route Association, held here last night, plans were made for the annual meeting in Elkton April 30.

G. O. P. Delegates to Welcome 'Wax Works,' Says Fletcher

"Mr. Farley's Wax Works" will be welcomed at the Republican National Convention in Cleveland in June, Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the G. O. P. National Committee, said in a public statement last night. He referred to the "exhibition of of Government functions and activities," which are to be sent to both parties' conventions.

At about the same time, the National Emergency Council issued a statement making it clear that it was the council, and not Postmaster General James A. Farley's Democratic National Committee, that is sponsoring the exhibition.

"We will welcome Mr. Farley's wax works," Fletcher said.

"This is the best news I have had for weeks.

"I had no idea Mr. Roosevelt's boondogglers were so bright.

"I feel sure that the delegates and visitors to the Cleveland convention, who will get the first view of this boondoggling, will find it amusing and instructive in the use of Federal funds for political purposes.

"We will now have a chance to see Mr. Farley's stamp collection, a miniature of the ditch dug near Miami to let in the fish to eat the mosquitoes, and of the Memphis dog pound where they wash the pups before giving them the gas—a treatment which might be applied beneficially to some of the boys who think up these ideas.

"We shall hope to see a miniature model also of Reedsville and of Red House, where the weeds grow through the floors and walls and water fills the cellars of the houses no one will buy.

Since the Federal Communications Commission no longer has to pore over the telegrams of American citizens asking their wives to meet them at the train, it might hook up a loud speaker so convention visitors may hear the tides in Passamaquoddy Bay crying for Federal funds which arrive since Congress got up enough courage to say 'no' to this particular insanity."

The Emergency Council, made up of President Roosevelt, Cabinet members and chiefs of emergency agencies, had announced that the exhibit would include a philatelic display, Department of Justice fingerprinting demonstration and other samples of work from the HOLC, CCC, TVA, WPA and other agencies.

Fletcher's statement concluded:

"It is to be hoped that the wax works will contain heroic statues of the public benefactor who thought up this new boondoggling project."

Bill Extending Power Of FDIC Is Approved

By the Associated Press.

Congressional action was completed by the House yesterday on a bill extending until July 1, 1938, the authority of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to make loans to weak banks to facilitate their reorganization or liquidation.

The measure now goes to the White House.

It would permit loans to banks when in the judgment of the corporation such action would reduce the risk, or avert a threatened loss to the corporation, facilitate a merger, or a consolidation of an insured bank, or facilitate the sale of the assets of an open or closed insurance bank.

Borah, Knox Camps Dispute Illinois Ballot

Each Faction Claims 24 Delegates After Splitting State in Primary.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 16.—Rival claims to 24 of the delegates elected in Illinois Tuesday to the Republican National Convention issued tonight from the camps of Col. Frank Knox and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho.

Managers for Col. Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, who held a slightly better than 80,000 majority over Borah in the Presidential preferential vote in latest compilcations, said all except 3 of the 49 delegates chosen in the primary were tagged for him. They conceded one Chicago and two down-State delegates as favorable to the Presidential aspirations of the Idaho Senator.

But Carl G. Bachmann, head of the Borah-for-President committee in Washington, asserted 27 of the delegates elected were Borah men.

Edgar J. Cook, who managed the Senator's Illinois fight against Knox, took a hand in the controversy by declaring that all delegates from districts carried by Borah were "honor bound" to respect the voice of the voters and seek to promote the Idahoan's candidacy "just as definitely as if they were instructed by a convention."

Claim Down-State Victory.

On this basis, Borah's headquarters here declared the votes of the two delegates each from the dozen down-State districts in which Borah's popular vote topped the Chicagoan's should be for their candidate.

Latest totals on the Borah-Knox vote from 6,648 of the States, 7,426 precincts gave:

Total: Knox, 439,253; Borah, 358,454; majority, 80,799 for Knox.

Their combined down-State total of 433,733 was 14,644 more than President Roosevelt received in that area in his unopposed solicitation of the Democratic preferment vote. Roosevelt's total in the State, however, was 1,250,110, against 797,707 for Knox and Borah combined, an advantage of 452,403.

Nebraska May "Draft" Norris.

Lincoln, Nebr., April 16 (AP).—New impetus for the movement to return George W. Norris, the veteran lawmaker, to his United States Senate seat, came today as a result of Tuesday's primary, in which he did not seek renomination.

With Nebraska's Democratic Senator, Edward R. Burke, of Omaha, asserting he could never support the party's Senatorial nomination winner, former Congressman Terry Carpenter, virtually all factions of the party were reported by leaders lining up behind Norris, an Independent Republican.

The list of his Democratic backers, they pointed out, was headed by President Roosevelt.

Burke reiterated his plea of more than a year ago for bipartisan support for Norris and J. E. Lawrence, Lincoln editor—who is chairman of a bipartisan group to draft Norris for re-election—said the committee's next step was in the process of formulation. It was expected to be a State-wide circulation of petitions entering Norris as an independent candidate in the general election next fall.

It was regarded in party circles as a strong possibility that Carpenter would cast aside his own ambitions and support Norris if Norris makes the race.

Robert G. Simmons, of Lincoln, winner of the Republican nomination Tuesday, has declined to disclose what his plans would be should Norris file independently.

Landon Factions to Merge.

New York, April 16 (AP).—Former Attorney General Albert Ottinger, of New York, after a conference with the national campaign manager of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, issued a statement today preparing the way for the dissolution of his volunteer "Landon for President" committee.

The formation of this committee some weeks ago had created internal differences among the Landon forces in New York State.

John Hamilton, in charge of the Landon campaign over the country, conferred with Ottinger on his current trip to New York.

Ottinger said he would lend his co-operation to all the various Landon groups, including the Eastern regional committee organized two days ago by former residents of Kansas and headed by Brock Pemberton, Broadway producer.

Hamilton immediately gave this committee official sanction.

Democrats Hail Lehman.

Albany, N. Y., April 16 (AP).—The Democratic State committee today indorsed the administration of Gov. Lehman and adopted a resolution stating the "people insist upon his remaining in office."

The committee, meeting for only 31 minutes, also adopted a resolution commending President Roosevelt to the people of the State and Nation, "confident of the outcome."

Without a dissenting vote, Postmaster General Farley was re-elected State chairman for his fourth two-year term.

Can't Do Everything You Want, Garner Wrote Foe of New Deal

Vice President Said He Couldn't 'Do Half What I'd Like to Do' to Kirby's Charge Roosevelt Regime Strays From Party Principles.

Correspondence between Vice President Garner and John Henry Kirby, anti-New Deal leader, in which "the apostasy of the Roosevelt Administration to the cardinal principles of the Democratic party" was mentioned, is in the hands of the Black lobby investigating committee, it was learned last night.

The letters were among books, records and papers subpenaed by the committee from Kirby, who was a leader in organizing the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution, in which organization he was associated with Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, also a bitter foe of the Administration.

"Personal.

"My dear John:

"How long are you going to tolerate the apostasy of the Roosevelt Administration to the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party and the notorious contempt for the plain terms of the Constitution?

"Your friend,

"JOHN HENRY KIRBY."

The Vice President's reply, dated last July 9, four days after the Kirby letter was written, follows:

"Dear John Henry:

"Your favor is just called to my attention.

"You can't do everything you want to and I can't do half what I would like to do. You can't control everybody you would like to and I am in a simial fix. I think that answers your question.

"With regards and wishing you health and happiness,

"Sincerely,

"JNO. N. GARNER."

Tour Executives Visit Virginia Battlefield

Fredericksburg, Va., April 16 (AP). Twenty-five tourist agency executives who are touring Virginia left here this morning for Petersburg after visiting historic points in this city and section.

6th Lee Jail Breaker Reported Recaptured

St. Charles, Va., April 16 (AP).—Sheriff R. F. Giles, of Lee County, said today that deputies had recaptured Hubert Taylor, one of 12 prisoners who sawed their way out of the Jonesville Jail several weeks ago.

Taylor was the sixth to be retaken. Sheriff Giles said he had information as to the whereabouts of the other six and predicted they would be returned to jail soon.

Farley Invites Foes to Explain Their Criticism

Choice of Any Candidate Won't Stop Roosevelt Victory, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsfield, Mass., April 16.—Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, demanded tonight that opponents of the Roosevelt Administration name "what particular element" of the New Deal they would abolish.

"I can find no answer to this in the various speeches emanating from candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination, from the Liberty Leaguers or from the heads of the Repubican national organization, voluminous and violent as all thtse have been," declared Farley.

He spoke at a meeting of Democratic organizations of four western Massachusetts counties. He asserted President Roosevelt would be supported this year "as vigorously and completely as he was in 1932.

Cites Candidates.

"This is as good a place as any to put in that it makes no difference whether the Old Dealers take the logical course of naming Herbert Hoover as the standard bearer who best represents their principles, or Gov. Landon of Kansas, who has not yet taken the country into his confidence as to what his policies would be if he were translated to Washington, or mournful Col. Knox, the Chicago publisher, or anybody else who has been suggested as the candidate to contest with President Roosevelt this year."

Farley questioned if the Administration foes would abolish the public works program, the emergency employment program or the emergency relief.

He declared what the critics called "boondoggling" saved the homes and farms "of a good many of your neighbors during the recent floods," adding that dams erected under the Works Progress Administration kept waters from ravaging fields to the northeast of Pittsfield.

Farley said Administration opponents talked of politics in connection with relief funds.

Local Distribution.

"The State administrations have in nearly every instance done their own distributing," added Farley. "Gov. Landon's State of Kansas participated in the direct relief money given or loaned by the Federal Government to the extent of $43,328,867. Herbert Hoover's State of California was aided to the extent of $163,793,863. Senator Vandenburg's State of Michigan shared to the amount of $116,236,999. Senator Dickinson's Iowa has had $25,952,836 as its share. Col. Knox's Illinois gratefully accepted $211,286,471 and Senator Borah's Idaho welcomed the receipt of $15,489,071.

"Six States failed to give Franklin D. Roosevelt their electoral votes in 1932. Will anybody suggest that Maine, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Delaware were discriminated against in the matter of Federal care for their poor and unemployed?"

Moral Security Is Need of Day, Dr. Sizoo Says

Tells Social Council That Spiritual Problem Is Most Important.

Moral, social and spiritual security is the paramount need of American civilization today, rather than economic security, the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo told the Council of Social Agencies yesterday at its annual meeting in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A.

Making one of his last public addresses before taking over his New York parish, the retiring pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church stressed supremacy over material values.

In the past century, he said, religion has seen the necessity of becoming integrated with everyday life and, more recently, social service has come to see the need of being founded on religion. Good will, faith and love will play a greater role in the creation of a better world than the worship of material things, Dr. Sizoo declared.

Increasing social consciousness in Washington was ascribed by him to the accomplishments of the Council of Social Agencies and the Community Chest.

Like Dr. Sizoo, who takes over his New York church post next month, Sanford Bates delivered what was in the nature of a farewell address. The director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons is retiring as president of the council, but he will continue to serve the organization as a member of the board of directors.

Bates paid tribute to the council's officers and members who have served with him.

The following were elected members at large of the council: Mrs. Jesse Adkins, the Rev. John K. Cartwright, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, C. Marshall Finnan, John Ihlder, the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, Owen Lovejoy, Justin Miller, Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, Willard C. Smith, Walter S. Ufford and Mrs. Walter S. Ufford.

Three-year terms on the board of directors were voted to Mrs. Harry Bernton, Carl D. Wells, Dr. Cartwright, Finnan and Bates. Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone was elected for one year to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Dwight Clark.

Activities of the council's several divisions in 1935-36 are described in the fifteenth annual report which was made public at the meeting.

The President Dedicates New Interior Office

5,000 Watch as He Wields Trowel, Urges Policy of Conservation.

several years made advances far beyond the hopes of earlier day conservationists.

"But the battle goes on and must be carried forward with renewed vigor if future generations are to receive the full benefits that are their due."

Digs at Republicans.

He reminded his hearers the building they were facing is the first major Federal structure in the Capital to be started and completed in his Administration. General laughter greeted the remark, a veiled reference to the monumental governmental buildings in the downtown triangle which were started under Coolidge and Hoover and finished under Roosevelt.

Begun last August, the Interior Building is scheduled for completion next December. As one observer pointed out yesterday, should there be a construction delay of even four or five weeks, President Roosevelt's re-election would be imperative to protect his boast, since inauguration day next year falls on January 20 for the first time.

The President praised the structure's utilitarian design—interpreted as another dig at the Republican-conceived, pillar-studded department buildings in the triangle—and lauded the project as one which has prvoided employment to thousands and which will relieve the Federal Government's acute housing problem.

"As I view this serviceable new structure," he said, "I like to think of it as symbolical of the Nation's vast resources that we are sworn to protect and this stone that I am about to lay, as the cornerstone of a conservation policy that will guarantee to future Americans the richness of their heritage."

The Wind Ceases.

The elements furnished another symbolic note. While Secretary Ickes was appraising the "wanton destruction" of previous administrations, the skies were overcast and a chilling west wind whipped the assemblage. But hardly had the President risen to speak when the clouds parted to reveal a brilliant sun whose warm rays were reflected by the building's limestone exterior.

And the wind ceased.

Mr. Roosevelt prefaced his prepared remarks with tributes to "my old friend, Waddy Wood," who is the building architect, and "my old friend, Admiral Peoples," director of the Treasury Department's procurement division, which is supervising erection of the structure.

Pats Dab of Cement.

Thanking the procurement division, the contractors and others concerned with the huge PWA building project, the President said he is especially grateful to the men doing the actual work of construction.

Facing the southeast cornerstone, at Eighteenth and C streets northwest, Mr. Roosevelt called the audience's attention to the fact that the tiny trowel which he held aloft was used by President Washington at Capitol exercises in 1793.

"I think it is a good augury," he said laughingly.

Alexander Howie, stone contractor, slapped a wad of cement on the top of the protruding stone, and the President patted it out neatly. Holding tightly to their silk hats, Ambassadors Saito and Najera, of Japan and Mexico, respectively, craned their necks for a better view. The German Ambassador, Hans Luther, just smiled and kept his seat.

Roosevelt Makes Joke.

Minister Amine Youssef, of Egypt, was blocked completely by the battalion of newspaper photographers engrossed in capturing the event on film, and he walked disconsolately back to his chair.

"Well and truly laid," said the President, surveying his handiwork. Secretary Ickes then dipped the trowel into the cement bin.

"Look, the Secretary of the Interior makes mud cakes," laughed the President. Only those close by, like Secretaries Dern, Roper and Morgenthau, Chairman Frederic A. Delano of the Park and Planning Commission, and a few others, heard the joke, but Ickes' hearty laughter made the merriment general.

Architect Waddy Wood was next to help seal the cornerstone, which contained a copy of the Bible, pictures of Ickes and the President and numerous other mementoes. Then it was slid efficiently into place by Howie's assistants, Alec Ewen, William Coutts and A. G. Stanley.

The Marine Band, led by Capt. Taylor Branson and perched immediately overhead on a second-story terrace, broke into "The Star-Spangled Banner," igniting a wave of applause participated in by the Cabinet members, WPA Chiefs Harry L. Hopkins and Aubrey Williams, scores of lesser New Deal executives, the 15 Hopi Indians who were present as an added attraction, and the thousands of onlookers.

1,300 Seats Provided.

Thirteen hundred seats were provided for invited guests and, in addition, three times that number viewed the exercises from the steps of Constitution Hall, the temporary building across the way, nearby rooftops, atop automobiles and along Eighteenth and C streets.

Construction operations went on as usual—the building is a special rush job—and the speeches were made to a modulated accompaniment of riveting and stone hoisting.

Ickes wasted no time in launching his attack upon "the most rugged of our rugged individualists" wasting the Nation's resources. He hammered upon his recommendation that Congress establish a Department of Conservation to thwart the corruptionists.

"From the point of view of the future," he said, "I can see nothing more worth while that America could do at this time than to charge a great department of the Government with responsibility for such development and use of our natural resources as is consistent with their preservation for the benefit and continued use of future generations.

"Not only should there be such a declaration of purpose, there should also be an orderly and logical arrangement of conservation activities. There is grave doubt in my mind that conservation will ever become the major policy of government that it should be until some such action is taken."

Secretary Scowls.

A red carnation in his lapel and a scowl on his face, Ickes acknowledged the Interior Department's realization "that a definite stop to ill-advised exploitation has been too long deferred."

"There has been observed no concentrated effort, resulting from a burning zeal for conservation, to make it (conservation), as it should have been made long ago, a major policy of our Government. We have done quite a lot of wishful thinking about conservation, but so far active foes from without and muddle-headed friends within the ranks have formed an unnatural but powerful opposition that has been of benefit only to the exploiter."

He reviewed Mr. Roosevelt's record as a conservationist, as an owner of farm lands, as New York State Senator and Governor, as Assistant Secretay of the Navy and as President. He outlined achievements of the present Administration in the fields of reforestation, reclamation, soil conservation and flood prevention.

"Having already fairly won the right to be ranked as the greatest conservationist in American history," Ickes said, "President Roosevelt will continue to give ample proof, not only of his theoretical interest in this policy, but of his practical ability to give effect to it."

Pokes Fun at Buildings.

In his introductory address as master of ceremonies, Delano, the President's uncle, slyly poked fun at the new Federal buildings in the downtown triangle for their ornamental doodads and gadgets, their interior courts and their labyrinthine corridors which often compel one to walk a few blocks to reach an office which is only yards away.

The new Interior Building, he said, provides a central corridor for convenience and office rooms that a hotel operator might proudly describe as "all outside."

"I do not approve," he said, "of architects who design buildings with little regard for their requirements and the function they are to perform."

The Natoinal Capital Park and Planning Commission, of which Delano for years has been chairman, is the Federal agency which passes on architectural and location plans of new Government buildings in Washington.

Incidentally, the mason's level, which President Roosevelt used on the corner stone after it had been placed in position, was the same one wielded by former President Hoover at corner-stone exercises at the Commerce, Labor-I. C. C. and Archives buildings in the Federal Triangle.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, retiring pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation. The benediction was pronounced by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of Catholic University.

Text of Roosevelt Speech

The text of the President's address yesterday at the laying of the cornerstone of the Interior Building follows:

Every American who loves his country should take to heart the earnest plea of the Secretary of the Interior for a vigorous, continuing national policy of conservation. As for myself, I am dedicated in this cause. And the Department of the Interior, as now constituted, is fully alive to the imperative necessity of protecting and preserving our natural resources.

A nation less bountifully endowed than ours without a national policy of conservation would have ceased to exist long ago. The remarkable thing was that the people of the United States were so complacent for so long in the face of exploitation, waste and mismanagement; yes, even larceny of the natural wealth that belonged to all the people.

Not all of the people remained insensible to what was happening. On occasion there came as cries from the wilderness warnings against the ravaging of our forests, the waste of our top soil and water supplies and the dissipation of our oil reserves and mineral deposits. Theodore Roosevelt, for one, rose up and battled against this squandering of our patrimony. He, for the first time, made the people conscious that the vast national domain and the natural resources of the country were the property of the Nation itself and not that of any class, regardless of its privileged status.

Supported by an awakened country, which by now is beginning to realize the truth of the old warnings we of this Administration have devoted our thoughts and energies to the conservation of our God-given wealth. Employing every agency of Government at hand to protect our birthright we have in the past several years made advances far beyond the hopes of earlier day conservationists. But the battle goes on and must be carried forward with renewed vigor if future generations are to receive the full benefits that are their due.

The Department of the Interior, first known as the Home Department, was established four score and seven years ago, and since that time its activities have been intertwined with the internal development of the Nation itself. The report of the committee of the House of Representatives which favored creation of the department gives us an interesting picture of the times. This report said:

The general fact remains unaffected that war and preparations for war have been practically regarded as the chief duty and end of this Government, while the arts of peace and production, whereby nations are subsisted, civilization advanced and happiness secured, have been esteemed unworthy the attention, or foreign to the objects of this Government. It seems to us that this should not always continue, but that we should, as a wise people, reorganize the Government so far as to fulfill these duties also, which are suggested by the nature, aspirations and wants of our race as physical, moral and intellectual beings; that it should do something toward protecting the people against those internal enemies—ignorance, destitution and vice, as well as against those foreign foes who may invade or who it is apprehended may assail us."

And so, the Department of the Interior came into being with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet with jurisdiction over the commissioner of the General Land Office, the commissioner of patents, the commissioner of Indian affairs and the commissioner of pensions.

Only one clerk was provided for, a chief clerk at $2,000.

Mr. Secretary, we have grown up since 1849.

As the country expanded and the needs of the people grew, the activities of the Interior Department broadened to new fields of endeavor.

In the design for this new Interior Building, the cornerstone of which we are laying today, architects have been guided by sound principles of utility and economy. Without sacrificing any of the dignity deserving of a great department of the Federal Government, they have conceived a useful building of austere simplicity. They have been sparing in the application of rich ornament, but convenience, comfort and sunlight have not been sacrificed.

We have acted wisely, I believe, in erecting this new building at this time. We have incorporated it in our public works program, which was established as a means of providing sorely needed employment in the building trades and the industries supplying them and which has already been successful in aiding the return of the Nation to better times. This building rising above us is but a unit of our great public works program which is erecting thousands of schoolhouses, hospitals and other public buildings throughout the land.

Other factors in addition to the problem of relieving unemployment influenced our decision to erect this building without further delay. The great Federal family in Washington, like other large families, has its own serious housing problem. We have grown over a long period of years until governmental buildings have been taxed to capacity, and every available square foot of space put to necessary use.

Government departments have been forced to seek space in buildings other than those owned by the Federal Government. We are now leasing several million square feet of office space in over 100 privately owned office buildings and have been obliged, in a few cases, to find quarters in residences and apartment buildings. We are eager to complete this building in order to reduce the rent bill. When this building is in use many Government workers will be gathered back under a roof owned by the Government.

As I view this serviceable new structure I like to think of it as symbolical of the Nation's vast resources that we are sworn to protect and this stone that I am about to lay, as the cornerstone of a conservation policy that will guarantee to future Americans the richness of their heritage.

Hoover Fears Kidnap Wave If Fund Is Cut

Senate Committee Slashed $225,000 Off $6,025,000 Bureau Request.

By the Associated Press.

A warning by J. Edgar Hoover that any slash in appropriations requested by the Justice Department's Bureau of Identification might result in a new "wave of kidnaping," was made public yesterday by a Senate Appropriations sub-committee.

The statement was made in recent hearings before the committee after Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, had protested that the bureau had been "running wild" in spending money. The committee cut $225,000 off the bureau's request.

Hoover was asked why his bureau claimed credit for solving most of the kidnapings in recent years when local authorities and others broke many of them. He replied he had given credit where it was due.

"Forced to Kill Dillinger."

New light on the John Dillinger case also was cast by Hoover, who said his agents were "forced to kill" the gangster in Chicago. Some have contended Dillinger was shot down without warning.

"Orders have never been issued to shoot a man if we can take him alive," Hoover told McKellar, who had questioned the wisdom of furnishing guns to Justice agents.

"We were forced to kill John Dillinger," he said, adding that since his men had been authorized to carry guns eight desperadoes and four Justice agents had been killed.

The committee cut the House total for the bureau from $6,025,000 to $5,800,000. The reduction, however, still left the total for next year $800,000 above the current appropriation.

Noting the bureau's appropriations had risen from $2,250,000 in 1928 to twice that figure, McKellar said:

"It seems to me your department is just running wild, Mr. Hoover."

"May I point this out," Hoover replied. "There were a series of crime bills—the kidnaping statute, the extortion statute, the bank-robbery statute, the fugitive law, the stolen-property law and several others enacted by Congress, which have greatly increased our work."

Senator Hale (Republican), Maine, asked what would be the effect "if word should go out that Congress was withdrawing appropriations for suppressing" kidnaping.

"You would have a wave of kidnaping," Hoover replied.

"It would start up immediately?"

"Exactly. There could not be the slightest doubt about that. It would cripple law enforcement and place a premium on lawlessness."

McKellar commented that the "culprit" in the Weyerhauser case "was not detected by your bureau, but by a clerk in a department store."

"Through the efforts of our investigators in advising all department stores of the list of ransom bills," Hoover replied.

The Tennessean also contended Bruno Richard Hauptmann had been "turned in by a filling-station attendant."

Hoover retorted the gold certificate Hauptmann gave for gasoline was turned in by the station agent to a bank after he got the license number of the car. Bureau agents arrested Hauptmann, Hoover said, with the assistance of the New York State police.

"But if it had not been for the gas-filling station you never would have had the man in the case?"

"Of course, our agents have to have information in all of these cases to solve them."

Maine Delegation Fights for 'Quoddy

Refusing to accept the President's abandonment of the Government's tide-harnessing project at Passamaquoddy Bay as final, members of the Maine Congressional delegation yesterday conferred with Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and plan to suggest a "modified" plan to the President.

The "modified" plans, which the President hinted may be considered later, are understood to have been devised by the War Department on a basis of a $30,000,000 expenditure, instead of the possible $60,000,000 cost of the present project.

"I regard the President's statement as inconclusive," Representative Ralph O. Brewster, former Republican Governor of Maine, said yesterday. "The delegation still believes something acceptable will be worked out, and may call at the White House in the next few days."

Forgotten Children

Exactly a month after President Roosevelt's announcement of plans for a crossing elimination program, the Advisory Committee on Allotments, now extinct, turned over to the Bureau of Public Roads $200,000,000 for that purpose.

Then began a period of Government red tape. The following is quoted from the recent report by the Works Progress Administration on these projects, and—though dull reading—it tells some of the story:

"In accordance with the rules and regulations issued by the President on July 12 (three months after the Rockville tragedy), funds are not available for expenditure on new work projects until a program of proposed projects has been submitted by the State Highway Department to the district engineer of the Bureau of Public Roads, and with his approval, to the State administrator of the Works Progress Administration and the State director of the National Emergency Council. Having received their concurrence on the basis of availability of relief labor, the projects are submitted for approval by the district engineer to the Bureau of Public Roads in Washington.

Rules and Regulations.

"Subsequent to the Presidential approval of projects, the State must file complete plans and specifications with the district engineer of the bureau. The district engineer, at his discretion, may authorize advertisement of a project, but can not agree to the award of any contract until after the project has been approved by the Washington office of the bureau."

After that there are numerous rules and regulations concerning employment of labor.

Last June the $200,000,000 crossing elimination fund was allocated to the States, half on the basis of population, a quarter on the mileage of the Federal-aid highway system, and a quarter on the railroad mileage. Before this was done, $4,000,000 was deducted from the total for engineering costs.

In spite of this red tape, on December 31, 1935, a total of $28,474,929 contracts had been awarded. On April 11, the anniversary of the Rockville accident, this total had reached $56,343,092, a little more than one-fourth of the total. President Roosevelt said in making his original announcement that all the work was expected to be completed by July 1, 1936, less than three months from now.

Last December no contracts for grade-crossing elimination had been awarded in Maryland. On April 11 Maryland awards totaled $314,000. The Rockville crossing was not yet among them.

It is estimated that it takes at least six months to complete a grade-crossing project. The first contracts were awarded last August. Three-fourths of them have not yet been awarded.

In the meantime, the Government has spent $7,000,000 in the job of harnessing the moon at Passamaquoddy Bay in Maine, and $5,000,000 to cut a gash across Florida to start a ship canal, both of which projects the President has announced will be abandoned.

Seniors Meet In Scholarship Test Tomorrow

One hundred and one outstanding seniors from Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia high schools will meet tomorrow on the Nebraska avenue campus of the American University to compete for four four-year scholarships offered by that institution through The Washington Post Scholarship Competition. Following a morning of examinations the finalists will attend an entertainment program arranged in their honor by faculty members and students of the university.

The major prizes, entitling the winners to full tuition at the American Liberal Arts College, will go to the leading contestants from two of the three sections of the competition area, one embracing Alexandria City and 29 counties in Virginia; the other including 11 counties in Maryland and 3 in West Virginia. A District of Columbia sectional prize, also providing full tuition for four years, was won last Saturday from a field of local finalists by Frances Campbell, Western High School.

Additional Awards.

Two additional awards, worth $500 each, providing half tuition for the next four years, will go to the two finalists from the entire area who place immediately below the three top winners.

Entertainment for the finalists will include a luncheon in their honor in the women's dormitory and a sightseeing tour, as guests of The Post, to many points of interest in and near Washington. Miss Mary L. Brown, dean of women, will be in charge of the program and will be assisted by Mrs. Marjorie Golder, registrar, and Miss Ruberta Olds, of the faculty, by Melvin Wheatley, student council president, and the following winners of the two previous Post scholarship finals at American—Margaret Hill, Raymond Wrenn, Nellie Strong, Virginia Heintz, Odell Rosen and William Ashby Jump.

Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the Liberal Arts College, will be assisted in the examinations, which start at 9 a. m., by the following members of his faculty:

Flogging Victim's Screams Described

Bartow, Fla., April 16 (AP).—The first prosecution witness in the Tampa flogging case testified today he heard one of the three victims screaming as police questioned him at headquarters following a raid on a home where the men, organizers of unemployed, were meeting.

The witness, C. E. Jensen, bald, rotund Socialist, said he was with the flogging victims when Tampa police entered a private house and arrested them without ceremony as they were reading the constitution of the "Modern Democrats."

At police headquarters, said Jensen, he heard one of the three men, Joseph Shoemaker, screaming as he was being questioned out of Jensen's sight.

The State charges that after questioning Shoemaker, E. F. Poulnot and S. D. Rogers about alleged Communistic activities, police released them and a mob seized the three outside the station house, flogged them and tarred and feathered them. Shoemaker died. Seven former Tampa officers are on trial here on a charge of kidnaping Poulnot.

Mexican Troops Quell Political Uprising

Vera Cruz, Mexico, April 16 (AP).—Federal troops today re-established order in the town of Medellin, where the municipal authorities were overthrown yesterday in a local political uprising.

School teachers throughout the State of Vera Cruz declared a 24-hour strike because of the state's failure to pay many of them. The strikers said if the government does not catch up with the pay, they would strike indefinitely.

State Unemployment Insurance.

The highest court of New York State has upheld the validity of its Legislature's unemployment insurance act. The 5 to 2 decision emphasizes that there is "nothing unreasonable or unconstitutional in the legislative act which seeks to meet the evils and dangers of unemployment in the future by raising a fund through taxation of employers generally."

While there was doubt as to whether the court would uphold all provisions of the law, there could be no general exception to the conclusion that there is nothing unreasonable or arbitrary about levying a moderate tax upon pay rolls to make provision for the unemployed. Such action is a rational method of procedure to relieve the menace to society created by unemployment. And, as the court said: "It would be a strange sort of government, in fact no government at all, that could not give help in such trouble."

The sweeping character of the decision will, it is hoped, be followed rapidly by similarly favorable decisions in other States. The validity of the Federal law, of course, still remains to be tested and the decision there will turn upon different and more uncertain issues. But regardless of the fate of the parent law, the upholding of the New York act will assist to perpetuate State systems of unemployment relief as a vital part of the protective social legislation of the community. For that reason, the New York decision is more important than it would seem if viewed in isolation.

Reducing The Irreducible.

Prof. Victor H. Noll, of Rhode Island State College, brings his institution into the news by announcing certain criteria of "scientific thinking." Loose thinking, he feels, causes a great number of our present ills and troubles. That much is scarcely debatable.

Really scientific thinking, the professor indicates, is based on accuracy; intellectual honesty, open-mindedness, correlation of cause-and-effect relationships, suspended judgment and criticism which includes self-criticism. Here is an admirable list, but these attributes could be added to indefinitely, until it would take a scientist to determine if he were scientific. Some of them overlap; some are none too precise; some are so all-inclusive that the others seem redundant. And the endeavor to define "scientific thinking" by a handful of generalities seems, itself, a bit unscientific.

It may be suggested that the art of thinking can never be reduced to a formula of universal applicability. What seems essential to a realist is just a burden to a romanticist. Shelley would expire in a Utopia planned by H. G. Wells.

The same need for differentials applies in greater or less degree to administrative technique, religion, marital harmony, economic determinism, and Supreme Court decisions. It is the essence of an oracle to be ambiguous, and nothing starts dissension quicker than a strong statement. After all, the world is, in spots, still enticingly non-uniform.

A Valuable Precedent.

The full significance of the special rule granted by the House overseers on the Ellenbogen rent commission proposal should not be missed by Washingtonians. Such unusual consideration for a District bill establishes a valuable precedent. In effect, it is an emancipation proclamation for the District insofar as it strikes directly at the attempt of one man or any minority to run the city. By limiting to 90 minutes the debate on amendments to the Ellenbogen bill, its disposal becomes a virtual certainty for the next District day, now scheduled for April 27. The wonder is that the District leaders waited until now to ask for a special rule.

If similar consideration is shown other District measures, it will no longer be possible for a small group of obstructionists to tie up the entire program of local legislation. Nor will they be able to demand roll call after roll call, refusing to allow bills to be considered on their merits. The breaking up of this practice will earn for Chairman Norton, of the District Committee, the gratitude of the House as well as that of Washington citizens.

There may have been another reason for the obstructionist attitude of Representative Blanton toward the Ellenbogen bill. Not only was he blocking a vote on the rent control measure, but also consideration of the Sisson bill which lay behind it on the House calendar. The Sisson bill is a particular bane of the gentleman from Texas, inasmuch as it proposes to eliminate the red rider from the District appropriation act. And the red rider has been the special concern of the Blanton faction which slipped it past the House last year. This group is fearful of the Sisson bill—and well it might be.

Everything points to enactment of the Sisson bill, once it is brought up for vote. Already a strategy has been devised to forestall the possibility of a filibuster and even if this fails, the Rules Committee no doubt could be induced to grant a special rule for its consideration.

Mandatory Deportation.

Two principal considerations urge passage of the Coolidge-Kerr bill this session. One is the fact that, while the problem of immigration has on the whole been settled, the means for controlling undesirable elements among immigrants already on these shores have not yet been perfected. The second consideration is the situation of some 2,600 aliens of good character who are now rounded up for expulsion solely because of irregularities in their entry here. To deport them all, as is now mandatory, would be to throw their 4,000 dependents on public charity.

The bill, which touches immigration incidentally and then only to increase the restrictions, is designed primarily to improve the deportation laws. The legal apprehension and deportation of aliens illegally on these shores would be facilitated. The laws governing the deportation of alien criminals would also be tightened.

Criminals deportable under existing laws remain deportable under the Coolidge-Kerr bill. At present, compulsory deportation is required for aliens convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude committed within five years of their entry into this country and sentenced to imprisonment of a year or more, or for those having two such convictions and sentences, irrespective of date of entry. Due to these limitations, many alien criminals have escaped deportation. Immigration officials see 20,000 eligible for immediate deportation if the Coolidge-Kerr bill is passed.

As the bill was originally proposed, following recommendations of the Department of Labor, any alien convicted of violating a Federal or State narcotic law, or of any crime involving imprisonment for moral turpitude, would be deported if a committee comprising representatives from the Departments of Labor, State and Justice found such action "in the public interest." This also applied to aliens convicted of carrying dangerous or concealed weapons, and those found smuggling other aliens into the country. An interdepartmental committee's discretion was not trusted by the Senate Committee on Immigration, however. It revised the bill to make deportation under such circumstances mandatory.

The effect of this might require the deportation of any alien found guilty, for example, of stealing a loaf of bread, even if he had never been convicted of a crime before and had lived peacefully in the country for 30 years. Or, as the American Federation of Labor argues, an alien caught up in an industrial dispute, and thrown into jail for a day or so, would necessarily be deported under such a provision. The immigration authorities see grave danger of abuse in the application of legislation of this rigidity.

Without a reasonable measure of administrative discretion, the power of deportation is sure to be arbitrary and may become tyrannical in its exercise. In dealing with human fates, some flexibility must be allowed. The manadatory clause of the Coolidge-Kerr bill should be deleted before enactment.

When Cartoon Meets Cartoon.

Father Walsh precisely epitomized the plan to organize the Veterans of Future Wars when he called that bright and bumptious notion a cartoon. In plain black and white, the Princeton lads have drawn a caricature of the arguments advanced by World War veterans for pre-payment of the bonus. Like all good caricatures, it stings by whimsical exaggeration of actual proportions.

The roof-tops recently resounded with the plea of the veterans' lobby that the bonus be paid now, and not in 1945. It was emphasized that the veterans need the money before they become too old to enjoy it, that payment would stimulate buying power and help to liquidate debts the country over, etc., etc. As for finding the wherewithal, why talk about that?

The Princeton lads merely drew a distorted face on this same outline. Pay us, demand the Veterans of Future Wars, $1,000 apiece now rather than in 1965. With that sum in the pocket of every youth eligible for service in the next war, assuredly the lads could enjoy themselves in their salad days, assuredly there would occur a notable boom in the Nation's buying power, and assuredly an end would be put to Townsend. As to the wherewithal, in the bright lexicon of the New Deal there is no such word.

But if caricature is in order, the American Legion wields a pretty crayon of its own. Inviting the Veterans of Future Wars to share an "open house" here, Victory Post, No. 4, of the Legion, has offered to provide transportation for "wounded and psychopathic cases" among the veterans-to-be, and announced subtly that "a corps of nurses will be in attendance." But of course, adds the spokesman for the Legion, a few rules must apply—"All saxophones and ukuleles must be checked at the door, as instruments of torture are not allowed in civilized warfare"—and Victory Post declines to be responsible for the possible loss of coonskin coats.

The Legion may well chuckle over its riposte. We are all for better, and if possible, funnier cartoons. Especially, as cartoonists have long known, because of the paradox that exaggeration is often the best way to reveal the true proportions of an idea.

The Tactics of Despotism.

It is quite possible that the House showed poor judgment in refusing to approve the Black committee's request for funds with which to defend suits brought against it for alleged illegal seizure of telegrams. One of the most unsparing critics of the committee's methods voted for the resolution in order that the case might be fully and adequately presented to the Supreme Court. "I want to know," he said, "what the constitutional powers of a committee are and equally what the constitutional rights of an individual are."

In this particular case, the paramount question is whether the courts have jurisdiction over a Congressional committee inclined to a very cavalier attitude toward the constitutional rights of citizens. And it is rapidly becoming a matter of vital importance to ascertain definitely whether Representative Cox is right in holding that it is "not within the powers of the courts to interfere in any wise with the proceedings of Congress in the performance of a legislative function."

No matter how this issue is finally decided, however, adequate protection cannot be provided by the judicial branch of government against Congressional snooping and prying. Legislative bodies, and the committees which are their agents, must be permitted very broad powers of investigation in order to carry on their law-making functions intelligently. Consequently, when Congressional committees flagrantly abuse their discretionary powers by delving into affairs only remotely related to the legislative program, there is nothing to check them except the condemnation of their colleagues and the force of a vigilant public opinion.

The Black committee, as a flagrant example, has turned from the examination of lobbying activities to pillory the representatives of various organizations opposing New Deal policies. Its political partisanship and prejudice are no longer concealed by even a veneer of impartiality. Yet the broad powers accorded the committee under the resolution establishing it, gives it formal authorization to put on a very fair imitation of the Russian OGPU.

The Black lobby committee, like the Nye munitions committee, was entrusted with the task of laying the foundation for legislation of a highly important character. Both committees have wasted time and public money in propagandist inquiries that do little or nothing to further the work in hand. The bias shown in the conduct of the investigations has precluded their arriving at any constructive proposals. Moreover, their inquisitorial methods have given rise to a very real apprehension for the future of a democracy in which legislators resort to the bullying tactics of petty dictators. The courts cannot protect those summoned before such committees from verbal assaults which subtly blacken their character. And the procedure is none the less inquisitorial when unsavory actions are disclosed by this procedure. For justice demands fair play for even the blackest criminal.

The fundamental protection against this legalized menace to American traditions lies in the election to Congress of men who are sincerely anxious to preserve the spirit of democratic institutions. Therefore the most effective way of suppressing the evils of committee investigations, which have become increasingly intolerable with the passage of the years, is to give full publicity to their technique. If that is done, an aroused public opinion will eventually assist the weeding out of those lawmakers who prefer the tactics of despotism to those of democracy.

"Court records show that few divorce decrees are issued because of insanity," reports a statistician. How about marriage licenses?

So often it's the case that when an enemy offers to bury the hatchet with you, he has an ax to grind.

The Dust Bowl.

From the Dallas Morning News.

It is not the so-called Dust Bowl only which is responsible for the discomfort experienced by the general public during a time of high spring winds . . . The great air disturbances throughout practically all of the desert region of the greater Southwest are contributors to this phenomenon, which has gripped the attention of the Nation as never before.

Doubtless those intrepid builders of the West, the farmers who plowed up the sod cover which had protected the rich loam of the ages on the high plains, in part are to blame. But in the final analysis the World War is responsible for forcing man to plant wheat and cotton on the confines of what may be considered to be safe farming territory. Once the original grass is destroyed, it seems as if all the forces of Nature conspire against its restoration.

There is still another side to the dust problem. Scientists, with considerable show of proof, point to a 150-year drouth cycle for the United States as a whole. According to a study of tree rings in Arizona and New Mexico for more than 1,000 years, the country is gradually nearing a peak of more or less dry years, culminating about 1940. These observers find a relation between drouth and sunspots. There have been great drouths before, as may be seen by consulting the records. J. B. Kincer, of the United States Weather Bureau, recently showed that the temperature trend of the United States has been steadily upward for 70 years, which seems to bear out the hypothesis of the 150-year cycle.

Rail Rates In The South.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wholly untainted with sectional bias, the writer boldly asserts, as an incontrovertible fact which thrusts itself upon our national intelligence, that since the birth of this Nation the South by contrast has been trebly cursed.

First, prior to and since its settlement, by having emptied upon it almost the entire waterfall of its total area. Second, by its self-inflicted Civil War. Third, if not the worst, certainly not the least of all, the discrimination in railroad freight rates against her for hauls north and south of the Ohio River latitude. Nothing has done a tithe as much to retard the South's growth.

The writer who, during President Wilson's second Administration, thought he saw in Federal control of railroads an opportunity to correct this great evil, called upon some of the southern congressional delegation, among whom were our present Secretary Cordell Hull and Speaker Byrns, and they all favored the idea, but at the war's end the roads all reverted to private ownership, blasting that hope.

Twenty years ago the traffic manager of one of our biggest roads told me in his Chicago office that his road couldn't afford to make the same rates in the South where the traffic was so much lighter—it would mean a loss. I suggested that if given the rate, the tenfold growth in traffic would follow as a result of multiplied factories, that no rates meant no factories, no factories no traffic, that his great road shouldn't subscribe to the old woman's theory that her boy shouldn't go near the water till he learned to swim. This question of such vast import is slated for adjudication next month by the I. C. C. The prayer of the South is that justice will be done her. GEORGE E. GARY.

Capital Punishment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on capital punishment interested me, for I am one of the many who believe that procedure should be relegated to the uncivilized past, where it came from.

One point you might have included is that the abolition of capital punishment has already been tried in several States. Among them are Minnesota, both Dakotas and Wisconsin. You see we are a trifle more civilized than the rest of the States. My point is that these States get along finely in the more modern manner. If you look it up you will find that we have fewer murders than other States, and it has been many years since the death penalty was abolished.

I hope you will use your influence to help bring about national abolition of the practice.

ETHEL H. SMITH.

Too Neat, Too Jumbled.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am responding to the call to arms against what A. E. B. terms the "entombment" of the city's triangles. I pass the parks he or she alludes to at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue every day and I have always loved that spot in particular because it did have the lilacs. How can anyone remove the lilacs when it requires so long for them to mature? And anyone knows that the older the bush, the finer are the flowers if it is cared for and surely some of the money being spent so carelessly could be directed into a channel to take care of these decorative plants.

There is another place from where the beautiful bushes have been removed and made into a bare city monument, and that is Sherman Square. There were once arbutus bushes there, and hazel bushes, also japonica bushes, and in the angle adjoining the Ellipse at Fifthteenth street, as well. But they have all been removed along with other flowering plants and the places left bare except for the thin strip of privet. Very neat, to be sure. Too, too neat by far.

I should like to add my protest to those whom you have allowed to express their views. The very big reason for continuing to live in the city of Washington and to care to own a home here, has been its beauty and Southern town air.

E. W. EDWARDS.

Washington, April 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all the opposition to the remodeling and renovating of the small parks in downtown Washington? They surely have been a disgrace to the city, and especially Franklin Park, with its jumbled mess of crumbling walks, dusty foot-paths and dilapidated benches, with no thought having been given to the general plan and layout.

The transformation which is taking place in Lafayette Park with broad curving walks and the general scheme of perfect proportion throughout, from an artist's conception, will indeed be an asset to the coming new modern Washington. H. W. ALLYN.

Washington, April 16.

Gentlemanly Instincts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Statements appearing in the Congressional Record within the past week have suddenly split the House membership into two divided groups over a new question. The startling declaration has been made by Mr. Blanton from Abilene that he has "gentlemanly instincts." Many of his colleagues openly assert that Mr. Blanton is just trying to kid the public. They say no man has the right to make a claim like that unless he can point to something to prove it. Others, more credulous, say that perhaps he has them, but for some reason of his own has neglected to exhibit them.

The citizens of Washington are also sharply divided on the question. In the parlance of the street gamin "He's got 'em or he ain't." The controversy that has arisen over the matter is more or less important and it will not subside until definite and convincing proof is offered one way or the other.

If Mr. Blanton is not spoofing, and if he really has them, why does he not clear up the clouds of uncertainty by showing them? If he would designate a time and place where he would put them on exhibition the event would probably draw a bigger crowd than the cherry blossoms. That, of course, would be asking a great deal of Mr. Blanton. It would call for publicity, and, like the shrinking violet, he has a well known aversion to front page lime-light.

No doubt he will go on in the future as he has in the past leaving a feeling of uncertainty in the breasts of even those who would like to believe that he has them. His failure to offer proof will strengthen the conviction of the multitude who already deny his claim. What became of Charlie Ross? Who struck Billy Patterson? To these unanswered questions will be added another. "Has Blanton got them?" DICK EDWARDS.

Washington, April 15.

Toleration's Give And Take.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The somewhat vehement discussion now engaging the public mind through the newspapers on religious toleration calls for discriminate thinking. Minorities almost invariably accuse majorities of being intolerant. When those same minorities become majorities, they in turn become quite as intolerant. This has been the history of religious intolerance. When the under dog gets on top, he acts just as the top dog did.

Genuine tolerance gives and takes equally. If a minority organization in our country claims toleration here, it must have a clean bill where it is dominant in any other country. If communism asks for toleration with us, it must show that it will not use the privilege to undermine our form of government. If religious organizations ask that our dominant form of religion be tolerant to minority beliefs, then it is the quintessence of ingratitude if our kindness be imposed upon, and opportunity be taken thereby to strike at the root of our dominant beliefs.

To call our public schools "godless" because they do not teach religion is to forget, as the records in the District of Columbia show, that in their earliest years these schools used the Bible and Dr. Watts' hymns as text books. But, for the sake of "toleration" and in order to conciliate certain minorities, our public schools eliminated practically every element of direct religious instruction.

It is not fair to the tolerant spirit of our land to say that because we have done this public money should be given to sustain the church schools of the people for whose sake we eliminated religious instruction. If religious minorities ask toleration, let them here and elsewhere be as tolerant as they ask us to be.

Nineteen Years Ago.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator George W. Norris felicitates himself on his vote against the resolution declaring the existence of a state of war between the United States and Germany; and rightly claims that his predictions as to the costs of the war to us have been vindicated. I cannot, however, share the opinion of the Senator as to the wisdom and righteousness of his vote under these circumstances and conditions that called forth the resolution.

It is to be noted that the resolution against which the Senator voted was not a declaration of war, as alleged by him, but the declaration of the existence of a state of war, or in other words, a recognition of the war Germany was already making upon us.

The Senator was absolutely right, and I felt the same at the time, in opposing our entrance into the war up to and until conditions arose that made it impossible for us to stay out if we were to preserve our self-respect, and the respect of mankind. Such conditions had arisen, when the resolution was presented in Congress at the suggestion of President Wilson, that left us no alternative. Our rights as a neutral Nation were being impudently and ruthlessly invaded, and our citizens were being murdered upon the high seas. In addition Germany was engaged in the most despicable espionage, and the fomenting of strife, and practically making war upon us within our own boundaries

The honor of the Nation had become involved. Is it something to be weighed in the balances with silver and gold, and its relative value therewith callously calculated against the costs of its defense and preservation? God forbid the thought! Honor is no less precious to a nation than to an individual, and cannot be weighed in the balance against material things. When a people become indifferent to the honor of their nation it indicates a moral decadence that foreshadows the spoliation of their material possessions.

The costs of the war may be set down to two things, namely, our utter unpreparedness and the ineptitude and stupidity of the Administration in lending money indiscriminately to the allies.

Dirty Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have published several letters about the dirty streets of Washington. When I came from California, which is almost manicured and where there is a strong feeling of State pride, the sight of this city's streets was a shock, which must be to all visitors.

If one of the photographers of your fine paper would take pictures of the mess, would it arouse any of the chiefs of street cleaning authority? The photographer would not need to walk far to see what lies about.

Where I live an incinerator belches forth filthy smoke filled with half-burnt particles of food. Oh, yes, I complained—so did others. Nothing happened — smelly smoke still continued. Is there anything one can do in self-defense?

Extra! Extra! Mystery Solved!

Post Office, Friday.

OURS not to reason why, Ours not to bat an eye.

When the C. M. ordered us to solve the riddle of South Carolina's Lake Murray, we had a premonition of trouble. But we obeyed orders.

On Thursday the ninth, we signaled the world, in this column, for enlightenment concerning that large body of water which rumor said had appeared within the Palmetto State. Before Thursday noon the world had beaten a path to our door.

At 10 a. m there was a letter. At 10:15 came a protest from a South Carolina cosmopolitan who said she resented our ignorance—as if she could resent it any more than we did! At 10:30 the Department of Commerce phoned. At 11 the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey promised to send us one of its charts covering Lake Murray—and later made good. Then the American Automobile Association came across. And ever since, there have been more letters and more telephone calls about Lake Murray.

Alas, excerpts are all we can pass along!

"The mystery about Lake Murray is another illustration of how the great facts and projects of the South are not so advertised and well known as even lesser things in other sections of the country . . . The lake . . . is visited annually by thousands who are fond of boating and fishing . . . The power capacity of this project was a surprise to all but the engineers who surveyed the site . . .

"It is interesting, historically, to note that this spot was selected by the engineers as one of the possible points where the Government project known as Muscle Shoals could be located. I was the author of the bill authorizing the Government to select a site or sites for the location of a nitrogen plant to produce atmospheric nitrogen. This site, as I say, was one that was recommended, but, according to my recollection, was rejected on the ground that it was too near the coast and in case of war might be bombarded from the coast (about 100 miles away). I personally never did believe that these were the real reasons . . .

MR. WHALEY (Sec. to Hon. James F. Byrnes, Dem., Junior Senator from South Carolina): "Lake Murray was built in 1929 or '30. It's one of the largest hydroelectric developments in the country. At the time of its construction it was the largest earthen dam in the world . . . its shore-line is several hundred miles."

H. T. GUSS, 1341 Montague street northwest: "Driving home from Florida last week, we got a late edition of a Columbia newspaper telling that the floodgates (of Lake Murray) were opened and no serious damage anticipated."

"A SOUTH CAROLINIAN": "There have been articles in all the leading newspapers since the fall of 1926 telling of the proposed construction and then the actual construction work of Dreher's Shoals Dam, more commonly known as Saluda Dam. The lake formed by this dam is known as Lake Murray. It has developed into quite a summer resort, with cottages and some pretentious houses dotting its shore-line . . . The sunsets are something to rave about . . . A boy was fishing below the dam, and such a big fish came along that he just jumped on its back and was carried into midstream. Now go to Sebasco, Maine, if you like!"

R. W. TUPPER, Department of Public Relations, American Automobile Assocation:

"There is no necessity for you to finance an expedition into the South Carolina wilderness. Such an expedition would have to strike out over Highway No. 2, out of Columbia, for about eight miles, turn left onto Highway No. 60, trek over the paved road that runs across the length of the dam, reprovision at the native settlement of Lexington, and finally wind back to civilization over U. S. Route 1.

"You have placed Helen of Troy definitely in the realm of fact. Do you think you can translate a 750,000,000-gallon lake into the realm of mythology? You have asked your readers whether they believe in Helen. Let me ask you: Do you believe in the Tidal Basin?"

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Tight-Mouthed Craft.

Howard Thurston, the magician—may he rest in peace!—was a member of the most exasperating group on earth—the profession which delights to make chumps of ordinary men with playing cards, plug hats, ducks, rabbits, coins, vanishing furniture and toothsome young ladies in velvet knickers who smile as they are cut in half before the very eyes of the patrons.

For many years Mr. Thurston went up and down the world baffling people with his tricks, but, like the rest of them who have died when his time came to go, he left his public still wondering how he made the little lady float in thin air and how he could extract from a genuine egg the dollar bill borrowed from the embarrassed gentleman in the front row.

Ladies do not float in thin air and chickens do not lay dollar bills, so obviously thee was some deception in everything that Mr. Thurston did. But did Mr. Thurston, having reduced his audience to a state of utter bewilderment, ever have the kindness to approach the footlights and explain all so that they could sleep when they got home?

* * * *

Mr. Thurston did not, and neither did Harry Houdini or any other member of this tight-mouthed craft whose secrets are more closely kept within the professional circle than the darkest deals of Balkan politics, the private affairs of the best families and impending decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

It is their delight not only to deceive but to mock the hopeless confusion of the innocents out front, and millions of people have gone away from these shows too badly puzzled even to guess the answers. All other entertainers contract to clear away doubts in the closing minutes of the show, but the magician never tells the patrons how the story ends.

Mr. Thurston soothed the sting somewhat by his gentle, patient manner, whereas other magicians played down toward them with rasping superiority, but the net result was always the same.

What happened to the lion that vanished from the cage, how did he deal himself any five cards named by any five persons in the audience when half a dozen skeptics had shuffled the deck and how could any man swallow a package of needles and cough them up all strung together on a thread?

* * * *

These are questions which have been crying for answers for many years, my friends, and now another witness has gone to his grave taking his secrets with him.

To be sure, it is unreasonable to ask that a man explain such mysteries to one and all for the mere price of admission, for if he did he would have to create new ones. But, on the other hand, when a victim has sat for almost three hours watching an artist do things which his intelligence tells him can't be done he, too, deserves some consideration.

The secretive nature of this tribe, apart from the rest of the human race, is by no means the least of their marvels, for they have their trade unions, so to speak, and they sometimes gather to talk shop and perhaps to exchange mysteries, like kids trading marbles or stamps, but rarely, if ever, do they get drunk and blab.

I have seen a first rate professional magician pretty well awash with drams at a purely social evening, performing small tricks with cards and coins under the earnest gaze of people no further along than himself, but never a word said he as to how he did what he did, nor would he, the cad, reduce his feats to slow motion, even for a pal, old pal.

* * * *

And this brings to mind the fact that I rarely have seen a lady magician, except the little blond assistants in the velvet knickers who may not be magicians at all but just little blond assistants hired for the week through a local employment agency. Perhaps if there were lady magicians the secrets would be more loosely held and there would be less magic to taunt the spectators and send them home annoyed at their own bafflement.

More than once I have toyed with the idea of bringing a rifle to the theater and shooting the magician dead at the climax of the show, then rushing onto the stage to frisk his clothes for concealed animals and fowls, decks of cards and long garlands of gay silk handkerchiefs tied together. The suspicion is strong that they do not actually create these things out of air, as they like to pretend, but hide them in secret pockets made by fellow conspirators in the tailoring trade.

Thurston's tailor might be able to throw some light on the case if he could be lured into a locked room and tortured with matches.

I wonder if the United States Senate has ever considered using the powers of subpena to discover how the little blonde is made to float in midair.

School Superintendent Denies Pay Slash Rumor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., April 16.—The rumor that the salaries of women school teachers will be cut in order that the pay of male instructors may be increased was denied today by A. Crawford Gilkeson, division superintendent of Augusta County public schools. He says there is a possibility instead that the women teachers may also get a pay raise.

At the last meeting of the board of supervisors, at which school board members were also present, there was an indication that if any teachers' salaries were increased, the funds would have to come from slashes made elsewhere. It was explained that Augusta will lose some of its best male teachers to other communities unless salaries are raised.

Personalities of the Press Exhibit Smiles as Editors' Sessions Start

der the first, fourth and fifth amendments to the Constitution.

"This the American press will not tolerate."

He added:

"As to the freedom of the press, we still have it and we shall keep it. Only the most indefensible lack of vigilance and inconceivable stupidity will bring about any loss of it."

President Patterson, in reviewing the past year from the standpoint of the newspaper, said that too much publicity had been given the Lindbergh kidnaping case. But the New Jersey court, he said, was more to blame for the Hauptmann trial "circus" than were the newspapers.

He said that the departure of the Lindberghs for England was "not so important as the attention which it received might indicate."

"I see no reason to believe they were driven away from home by the newspapers," he continued.

Developments Listed.

In listing important news developments, Patterson mentioned "the emphasis on highway safety, stressed by newspapers all over the country. More and better campaigns than in any period of the past have been productive of marked results. Immeasurable as such campaigns are, it is conservative to surmise that thousands of lives have been saved."

Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, 75-year-old editor of the Woman's Home Companion, agreed with Patterson, saying that "the women are fed up with the Lindbergh publicity."

Emphasizing the role which women play in the success or failure of a newspaper, Mrs. Richardson said that the women's pages of the newspapers "are as out of date as the lace stocks and as the beaver hats our grandfathers wore."

Still Man's World.

"It's still a man's world in the newspapers," Mrs. Richardson said. "Women are accorded only a sort of nuisance value.

"Women demand more intelligent articles on the women's pages of newspapers and less of the cast-off from the other departments and 'boilerplate.'"

William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, told of his recent trip to the Orient.

"I saw Japanese planes flying over Peking and student riots in the street," he said, "but I never filed a word, because I felt that I didn't know the value or the meaning of those events."

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, discussed "The Police and the Newspapers," afterward answering questions put to him by the editors.

Hoover talked for two hours, discussing the Lindbergh case, capital punishment and parole, and the responsibility of the press in printing crime news. All of his remarks were off the record.

He was introduced by Malcolm W. Bingay, editor of the Detroit Free Press, as "the greatest police officer on earth."

The editors will convene at the Press Club this morning at 10 o'clock, with appointment of a committee on nominations the first order of business.

Gardner Cowles, jr., of the Des Moines Register and Tribune, will talk on "What an Editor Should Know About Circulation;" John L. Morrison, of the Greenville (Pa.) Record-Argus, on "Irks;" Verne Marshall, of the Cedar Rapids Gazette, on "The Newspaper Value of Crusades," and Dr. Franz Hollering on "I Was an Editor in Germany."

At a luncheon in the Press Club at noon, Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator and chief of the WPA, will discuss "The Present and Future of Relief and Unemployment in the United States."

Other Speakers.

Topics listed for the afternoon session beginning at 2 o'clock are: Nathaniel Howard, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "A Critical and Constructive Review of Our Wire and Photo Services;" Stephen A. Bolles, of the Janesville (Wis.) Gazette, "Where Are We Going With the Radio or Where Is the Radio Going With Us?" Edson K. Bixby, of the Springfield (Mo.) Newspapers, Inc., "New Angles and New Fangles in News and Pictures;" Lee A. White, of the Detroit News, "Our Journalistic Problem of the Right of Privacy," and Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Graduate School of Journalism, Columbia University, "A Review of the Present Status and the Future of Schools of Journalism."

California Scientist Rouses Bacteria From 249-Yr. 'Sleep'

By the Associated Press.

San Luis Obispo, Calif., April 16. Microscopic dots of life have been aroused from a 249-year "sleep" to the normal activity they abandoned in 1687, Dr. Ira B. Bartle reported tonight.

Dr. Bartle, who has spent years studying spores and fungi, said he resurrected soil bacteria colonies which went into suspended animation two and a half centuries ago when they were sealed in the adobe walls of the Tumacacori Mission near Nogales, Ariz.

Last month he visited the old mission, founded by Eusebio Francisco Kino almost a century before FRA Junipero Serra established the California missions. From the 4-feet adobe wall on a belfry staircase he took a core of the inner brick.

In sealed, sterilized tubes he brought the brick to his laboratory here and said he succeeded in bringing the bacteria out of their lethargy.

"The samples obtained * * * showed 94 colonies," his report said. "In 48 hours there were 131 colonies. These colonies under the microscope showed soil bacteria and spores. No fungi have been found as yet. The life cycle of the predominant spore is about 96 hours."

In discussing the "sleep" of the minute creatures, Dr. Bartle said:

"These spores and bacteria live and multiply as long as there is moisture and oxygen. As this disappears, they begin putting on a thicker cell wall and the protoplasm thickens and contracts until eventually respiration and reproduction ceases and they go into a state of suspended animation, in which condition they are immune to almost every condition except fire itself."

Growers to Study Apple Advertising

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 16.—A series of county meetings will be held shortly over the Eastern Panhandle apple-producing counties to acquaint growers with the apple advertising program being formulated under "Appalachian Apples," a nonprofit organization of growers in West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. The meetings were decided upon by the executive committee of West Virginia Horticulture Society at a meeting here last night after the committeemen had given the advertising program their hearty approval.

Some of the larger growers of the panhandle have pledged 660,000 bushels of apples, at one-half cent per bushel, for this State's share of the four-State publicity fund, it was reported. The State sign-up should be 1,500,000 bushels, the group agreed.

An effort will be made to have orchards classified as soil-depleting by the United States Department of Agriculture, to place the orchards on an equal footing with other soil crops under the soils conservation act, the new Federal farm aid program. Apples have been grouped as neutral in preliminary classifications for the soil program.

Virginia Forestry Unit Reports Heavy Orders

Charlottesville, Va., April 16 (AP).—If the demand for forest tree seedlings and transplants produced at the Virginia forest tree nursery near Charlottesville continues to increase as it has in the past few years, it will be necessary to enlarge the nursery and its storage and shipping facilities, State Forester F. C. Pederson has informed Chairman Wilbur C. Hall of the State conservation and development commission.

Approximately 500,000 trees were shipped during March, and it is estimated that the total output of all species this year will be approximately 700,000 trees.

Chemists Study HighExplosive, Corn Dynamite

New Extraction Method May Open Commercial Field to Product.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 16.—Corn dynamite, a new product of the test tube, potentially superior to nitroglycerin, was reported to the American Chemical Society today by its president, Prof. Edward Bartow, head of the University of Iowa department of chemistry.

Prof. Bartow pictured the possibility of corn, processed in this new fashion, being used all over the country to blast stumps from fields, excavate road and skyscraper foundations, and "shoot" quarries, mines, and oil wells.

The new explosive is one of several possibilities opened by production from corn of a sugar-like substance known as inositol, hitherto unavailable because extraction made it cost about $500 a pound. In the last two months, Prof. Bartow said, Dr. W. W. Walker, in his department at Iowa, has discovered a method of extraction which tremendously cheapens the rare stuff, so that many laboratories already have started work on its possible uses.

New Product a Solid.

One of these is for a super-explosive. Inositol, Prof. Bartow said, is really a form of alcohol. By itself it is non-explosive, being composed of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen.

The difference between this and ordinary nitroglycerin, Prof. Bartow said, is that the new corn product is a solid instead of a liquid.

A cause for arthritis, in peculiar sulphur "jags" which the human body gets for reasons still unknown, was reported to the society here today.

The antidote for these jags is more sulphur. Six years of experimenting, which has carried the sulphur complex definitely into medical stages, were described by Drs. M. X. Sullivan and W. C. Hess, of the Georgetown University chemomedical research laboratory.

They discovered the sulphur jags through study of fingernails and hair. Both these organs contain high amounts of the human body form of sulphur, cystine. Changes in the sulphur in nails especially accompanied some, but not all changes in health.

Patients with arthritis had less than the normal amount of sulphur in nails. Healthy persons averaged 11.7 per cent of cystine, but rheumatic sufferers dropped as low as 7 per cent.

"This implied," the report stated, "an intoxication factor which draws on the sulphur complex and thus diverts sulphur from its normal channels.

"Injection of collodial sulphur was tried in a number of patients with low cystine nails. There was a marked increase in the cystine content of nails after the injections.

"And, in the opinion of the physicians, there was good improvement in the conditions of the patients, such as lessening of the swelling, less pain and a greater sense of well-being."

'Flat-Iron Murder' Charged to Woman

Baltimore, April 16 (AP).—A coroner's jury ordered Mrs. Marie Katherine Loots, 35, held tonight on a charge of murder in the flatiron slaying of her brother-in-law, John T. Loots.

Her husband, Charles A. Loots, was held as an accessory. The jury ordered both held pending action by the Carroll County grand jury.

The verdict said the victim "came to his death from blows on the head delivered by a flatiron in the hands of Katherine Loots. We hold Katherine Loots on a murder charge for the Carroll County grand jury. We also hold Charles A. Loots as an accessory * * *."

Testimony at the inquest developed that John Loots was attacked at his brother's home, near Hamstead, early Tuesday and died about six hours later. Police said he was attacked with a blackjack by Charles Loots, and that Mrs. Loots went to her husband's aid with a flatiron.

Norway's Protest Over Vessel Held as 'Rum Runner' Rejected

Captain and Aids Seized By Coast Guard Will Be Tried By Court on Smuggling Charges; Photographs Used to Substantiate Evidence.

By the Associated Press.

A protest by Norway against seizure of an alleged rum runner flying the Norwegian flag has been rejected by the United States. An official said last night the case would be prosecuted in Federal courts.

Wilhelm Munthe De Morgenstierne, Minister from Norway, lodged the protest with the State Department after Federal officers had seized the tramp steamer Reidun in New York harbor and arrested four of the ship's officers.

Secretary Hull's reply said that since the case already was before the Federal courts, it was beyond the jurisdiction of the State Department and he could take no action.

The Reidun, along with two other vessels flying the Norwegian flag, was charged with rum running in a formal protest made to the Norwegian government by the United States in January. Photographs described as showing the actual alcohol smuggling activities were attached to the American note.

Officials said the unusual photographs were made by Coast Guard patrol ships on famous "Rum Row," and their use in a formal diplomatic protest was said to have been unprecedented.

The three ships were alleged to have loaded alcohol in Antwerp, Belgium, and transferred it to smaller vessels off the coast of Newfoundland. From there the rum boats were traced by the Coast Guard, officials said, to landings at Boston, New York, Norfolk, Charleston, S. C., and other Atlantic ports.

The American Government protseted to Norway on grounds that a Norwegian statute prohibited vessels flying the Norwegian flag from engaging in smuggling. The minister here immediately assured Secretary Hull that a thorough investigation would be made.

The Norwegian government has made no formal reply to the American note.

Meanwhile, however, the small vessel, Pronto was seized, charged with landing illicit alcohol at Charleston. Its operations were traced by Treasury officials to an alleged connection with the Reidun.

When the Reidun, presumably on a legal voyage, put in to New York Harbor it was seized on charges involving previous activities, a libel placed against the ship, and four officers arrested.

Treasury Department officials said the officers, unable to raise bail, were still being held in New York. They will be taken to Charleston, where they have been indicted, for trial late in May.

Officers of the Pronto, officials said, also have been indicted and will be tried at Charleston.

The Once Over

That New Razor Blade.

The Mellon Institute of Scientific Research has perfected a new safety razor blade. Elmer Twitchell hasn't the particulars but he understands that after it goes over your face four times a bell rings if the beard is still there.

* * * *

"I have been working on a new razor blade for years myself," declared Elmer, "and I was just about to give it to the world when the Mellon Institute, which I had supposed was too busy with bigger matters to bother about shaves, gave out the announcement of its own blade.

* * * *

"Through a secret process, I have sensitized the steel in my blade to a point where any attempt to use it for anything except shaving can be easily detected. It changes color whenever anybody has used it to sharpen a pencil, open a crate, dress a fish, plane a door or remove a corn!"

* * * *

Mr. Twitchell seemed quite triumphant as he explained the details.

* * * *

"And that is not all. Listen! Should the wife take one of my blades and begin trimming and shaping some linoleum to fit under the kitchen sink, it doubles up and takes off a couple of fingers before she knows what's happened! Is that a razor blade?. Oh, boy!"

* * * *

Elmer went on to explain other details of what he considers the answer to all self-shavers' prayers. Printed plainly on both sides of every blade, he said, are the words, "Not a Carpenter's Tool."

* * * *

Another feature of the Twitchell blade is that it has fewer wrappers than the average blade, thereby making it unnecessary to use another blade to open the first one.

* * * *

It is the smallest blade ever invented, he explained further, the idea being to keep the facial cuts as nearly uniform in size as possible and so small that nobody but a doctor can tell whether they were caused by a razor wound or an insect bite.

* * * *

"The Mellon crowd beat me to it," said Elmer, "but I intend to come out with improvements in shaving soap, brush and strops at once before anybody else does. I have perfected a shaving cream tube with the cap attached to the tube so that it hangs by a chain and cannot be lost down the pipes. And I make it in any color you wish. For instance, if you have a couple of blue shirts in your bag, you take along blue shaving cream so that, in case the cap leaks, the stains won't show."

* * * *

"What's your shaving brush idea?" Elmer was asked.

"It's a combination shaving brush, hairbrush and toothbrush and can also be used to clean a typewriter," he said.

"But suppose I have no typewriter, Mr. Twitchell?"

$50,000 Fund Is Goal of Group; Campaign Is Nation-wide.

The sum of $31,000 was raised last night at a dinner in the Woodmont Country Club, preliminary to the opening of the United Jewish Appeal here for $50,000. This amount came in the form of special gifts from 102 contributors.

The general drive toward the $50,000 goal will open April 27 and continue for ten days. It will be part of a country-wide campaign to raise money for the relief of European Jewry, particularly in Germany and Poland, and for the reconstruction of Palestine, traditional home of the race.

A motion was made at last night's dinner to raise the District goal to $75,000. This was not adopted, but it was decided to try to raise that amount anyway.

Special contributions over $500 announced at the dinner follow:

S. Kann Sons Co., $2,000; Kaufmann, Goldamer Stores, $2,500; Alexander Hecht, $1,000; Harold Levy, $500; members of the Lansburgh & Bro. firm, $2,200; anonymous, $1,800; Morris Cafritz, $1,600; Gilbert Hahn, $750; I. S. Turover, $500; Benjamin Ourisman, $750; Simon, Koenigsberger & Young, $1,000; City Cab Co., $750; Paul Himmelfarb, $1,000; George Beneman, $500, and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, $2,500.

The speakers at the dinner included Morris Cafritz, Rabbi Abram Simon, Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, Harry Viner and E. I. Kaufmann. Rabbi Simon brought tears to the eyes of his listeners as he described the plight of Jews in Germany and Poland.

"There are a million Jews starving to death in Poland," he said. "It is only through the joint distributing committee, Jewish Red Cross, that another million has not starved in the past six years."

Speaking of the reconstruction of ancient Palestine, Rbbi Simon said: "God has blessed us with the gift of Palestine. Palestine provided refuge for 61,000 Jews last year."

Mr. Kaufmann said that there was no cause so great as "the one we are working for."

Jean Tobin, a newspaper reporter, was so moved by the descriptions of conditions in Germany and Poland that she took the floor and told of the slaughter and suffering she had witnessed in Russia in the revolutionary days.

Confession Reported In Freight Car Thefts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 16.—Local police, co-operating with Pennsylvania Railroad police, announced yesterday they had cleared up a series of freight-car thefts in railroad yards here with the confession of William Jones, 37, Negro, and the recovery of most of the loot, consisting of four cases of cigarettes, six dozen boxes of children's clothing and bolts of rayon.

Jones escaped several nights ago, pursued by a local policeman who fired several shots.

Merchandise valued at several thousand dollars has been stolen in recent months in railroad yards in the Cumberland Valley from Hagerstown to Carlisle, Pa. Carlisle police are holding John Keller, alleged "finger man" in the Jack Hart case in Baltimore, and Martin Bass, also of Baltimore, on charges of freight-car robberies.

Moulton Views Effect of $1,000 Rise in Incomes

Would Add 27.5 Billion in Buying Power, He Tells Market Group.

An average increase of $1,000 in the income of each of America's 27,500,000 families would finance "a satisfactory standard of living among the masses," Dr. Harold G. Moulton, of Brookings Institution, said last night.

In a speech before the American Marketing Society he said such an enlarged income for the masses would create a demand for additional goods and services totaling $27,500,000,000 annually.

He advanced no suggestion, however, on the method of adding $1,000 to the annual income of every family.

The economist said it would be easy for American industry and agriculture to meet such an immense additional production demand. The big problem of business, he added, is not production but marketing.

"There is a great desire," he said, "for what I would term a satisfactory standard of living, which would require an income increase of $1,000 per family."

A technical discussion of the open-price system, under which competitors in a given line of business keep each other informed of the prices they ask for their products, was led by Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, another Brookings Institution expert.

The purpose of any such system, he said, should be "to give us the right price—a really competitive price in terms of knowledge."

He denounced those who seek to further "agreement or collusion as to prices" in operating such systems.

Maryland River Yields Body of New Born Baby

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 16.—Albert Dixon, lunch room proprietor, yesterday found a box containing the body of a prematurely born child in the Monocacy River at Furnace Ford, Sheriff Roy M. Hiltner said today. No clews as to the possible identity of the mother were discovered.

The body was wrapped in Baltimore newspapers dated March 27. The box was made of wood and the lid had been nailed on. Dixon was looking for firewood when he found the box. The body was buried today in the local Potters field.

U. S. Agency Workers In Maryland to Meet

Baltimore, April 16 (A.P.).—Representatives of 65 Federal agencies in Maryland will hold their second State-wide co-ordination meeting here tomorrow.

Each agency will present a brief report. The meeting is sponsored by the Maryland National Emergency Council.

Arthur Hungerford, council director, said mayors, county commissioners, State officials and members of the Legislature were invited. They may ask for information regarding Federal work in their territories.

The meeting, Hungerford said, will allow the agencies to know what others are doing to prevent overlapping of work.

California Asks Return Of Ann Hewitt's Mother

Trenton, N. J., April 16 (A.P.).—The extradition of Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt to California to face two charges of conspiracy to commit mayhem on her daughter, Ann Cooper Hewitt, was requested today by Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California.

The charges grew out of a sterilization operation performed on the young woman.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said he woud decide probably tomorrow when to hold a hearing on the application.

Road Builders' Head Assails 'Socialization'

Chevalier, New President, Says Relief Injures Highway Industry.

Terming highway construction one of the most typical American industries, Col. Willard T. Chevalier, new president of the American Road Builders Association, last night deploredthe trend toward "socializing the industry in the name of relief."

Without directly assailing WPA, Col. Chevalier flayed the "socialization" which he said was injuring small business contractors. He was speaking at a dinner at the Willard of delegates to the annual business meeting of the American Road Builders' Association.

Col. Chevalier, vice president of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. of New York City, emphasized the importance of the highway industry. One man out of every ten in the United States, he said, is employed in some phase of highway transportation.

Other speakers at the dinner last night were Senator Carl Hayden, of Arizona; Representative Wilburn Cartwright, of Oklahoma; William P. McDonald, of Flushing, N. Y., retiring president of the association, and James H. McDonlad, of New Haven, Conn., treasurer.

At the business meeting yesterday morning Col. Chevalier, in taking office, urged that more attention be given to making roads safe.

"Safety must be built into the roads just as it is built into cars," he said. He also stated that no road is safe unless it can be driven at a 60-mile-an-hour minimum speed.

The convention concludes this afternoon after division meetings and a board of directors' session this morning.

Trans-Lux Corporation to Construct $350,000 Building.

Lease of the Walsh property on the west side of Fourteenth street between New York avenue and H street northwest for a total rental of more than $2,500,000 to the Trans-Lux Corporation, New York, motion-picture chain operators, as a site for a theater, stores and office building costing approximately $350,000, was announced yesterday.

The lease, reported as "the largest financial lease in the history of Washington," was made for Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, owner, and is for a period of 40 years. In the transaction negotiations for Mrs. McLean were handled by John F. Major who, in January, sold for her the Ouray, eight-story office building at Eighth and G streets northwest.

Major, who was formerly personal secretary to Edward B. McLean, has been appointed by Trans-Lux as agent handling the property. He was assisted in the negotiations by Nugent Dodds, attorney for Mrs. McLean; Monroe Lee, and John R. McLean, son of the owner. The corporation was represented by Percy N. Furber, chairman of its board of directors.

The building, to be of modernistic design and the latest in equipment and appointments, will be completed within six months.

Plans and specifications for the structure already have been prepared by a New York architect and will be presented to District Building Inspector John W. Oehmann Monday. As soon as they have been approved, a contract will be awarded to some local builder.

Mrs. McLean inherited the property from her father, Thomas F. Walsh, who built the Oxford Hotel on the southern half of the site which, in its entirety, has long been referred to as the "Oxford property." Walsh also built the Ouray Building. The Oxford Hotel and the Ellsmere Hotel, which stood at 1406-1410 H street northwest, were business landmarks for many years.

Several months ago, the northern portion of the property was leased to a parking firm and buildings there were razed. This lease was purchased when the current transaction was consummated. The entire property leased to the corporation has frontages of 93 feet on H street, 206 feet on Fourteenth street and 53 feet on New York avenue.

Plans for the new building provide for a two-story structure, to which additional stories can be added, if desired. The ground-floor space on both sides of the theater will be rented for shops, and the second floor for offices.

Girl Is Stricken With Meningitis On Visit Here

Blood Transfusion Given Rhode Island Pupil on Easter Trip.

Seventeen-year-old Margaret Graham lay unconscious in Garfield Hospital last night stricken with spinal meningitis while 30 of her saddened classmates were on their way home to Rhode Island after an interrupted Easter tour of the Nation's Capital.

A transfusion of blood from one of her classmates early yesterday morning quickened the beat of Margaret's feeble pulse and her condition was reported "slightly improved" by Dr. W. J. G. Thomas, in charge of the case. At the girl's bedside all yesterday was her widowed mother, Mrs. Josephine Graham, who was summoned here Wednesday.

The party of high school children from Wickford, R. I., arrived in this city Tuesday morning in high spirits, thrilling with anticipation at visiting the places about which they had read so much in their textbooks.

With the eagerness of children intent upon making the most of their Easter holiday, they set about immediately to "see the sights." While going through the Washington mansion at Mount Vernon, Mary complained of an unusual fatigue. She was taken back to the hotel and a doctor called. When she grew weaker, she was taken to Garfield Hospital, where her condition was diagnosed as spinal meningitis.

Mrs. Graham was notified at once. By the time she arrived Margaret had lapsed into unconsciousness and a blood transfusion was thought necessary. Clayton Adamson, one of her schoolmates, was the donor.

Fearing spread of the disease, Dr. Thomas, after a conference with District health officials, decided that the entire party should return to their home immediately or be placed under quarantine here. Saddened by the tragedy that had befallen one of them, the other children were all too ready to quit the city.

Senator Metcalf, of Rhode Island, arranged for a special car to be attached to a through train to Providence which the children boarded in the afternoon. Dr. Edward F. McLaughlin, director of the Rhode Island State Department of Health, in Washington for a health conference, wired his office to quarantine the party immediately on their return to Wickford.

Although Mrs. Graham has given physicians permission to perform any operation they consider necessary to save Margaret's life, Dr. Thomas said no immediate operation was planned. He indicated additional blood transfusions might be necessary and that it would be several days before the crisis would be past.

Insurance Theft Charge Holds Gallos for Jurors

Hagerstown, Md., April 16.—Charged with theft of $140, part of Mrs. Minnie Ridgeway's late husband's insurance, George Gallos was held for action of the May grand jury.

The woman testified in court here that she lost $120 gambling, and that Callas took the remainder from her pocketbook; that she was in fear of her life and made no protest at the time. Later she notified the police.

A Bit of the Alphabet Returns to President

President Roosevelt, who has thrust the alphabet upon the American public through his New Deal agencies, had a good-sized chunk of it thrust upon him yesterday. He became, simultaneously, a union mason in good standing, dues paid up for April.

It all happened at cornerstone exercises at the new Interior Building. A moment before he picked up the trowel of George Washington's, who was himself a skilled mason, the President was handed a B. M. P. I. U. membership card — Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union.

Alex Ewan, stone mason, with a rolling Scottish burr-r-r, presented the honorary card in behalf of the international union. The card was not a fancy, gilt-edged one, but the same as stick in the overalls of job workers. The President rewarded Ewan with a brisk handshake.

Then, as a full-fledged union stone mason, the Chief Executive went to work and spread his quota of cement over the top of the cornerstone.

Season's Oyster Catch Tops Last Year's Yield

Baltimore, April 16 (A.P.).—Maryland's 1935-1936 oyster catch was considerably larger than that of last year despite the lengthy freeze in January and February, preliminary reports to the State conservation commission indicated today.

The quality of oysters held up well, commission officials said. The flavor of some was damaged by large quantities of fresh water sent into the upper Chesapeake Bay by floods, however.

Definite figures on the catch will not be available for some weeks. Packing houses are allowed until April 25 to work stock now on hand.

The tonging season closed yesterday and the dredging season March 31.

The contract incluudes a single span steel plate girder bridge with reconstfucted substructure, as well as approaches.

Rockville Bus Suit for $25,000 Goes to Jurors

Driver Says He Slowed at Crossing, Did Not Hear or See Train.

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., April 16.—Attorneys trying the first of the damage suits arising out of the Rockville train-bus crash concluded their argument today and submitted the case to the jury.

One of the last witnesses before the arguments began was Howard R. Poe, owner of the bus involved in the crash. Poe said he was in Iowa at the time of the crash. Percy Lines, driving the bus when the train hit it and killed 14 children, was his employe, Poe added.

Lines testified yesterday that he slowed the speed of the bus from 25 miles per hour to 10 miles as he approached the grade crossing. He did not stop, he said, but could have halted the vehicle in 3 feet if he had seen the train or heard its whistle.

Three additional witnesses, living near the scene of the accident, testified today they had heard the locomotive whistle for the crossing. They were Edward Gandy, John R. Young and John R. Woods. Early in the trial about half a dozen Rockville residents appeared as defense witnesses and said they heard the whistle.

Poe and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad were co-defendants to 18 damage suits filed by relatives of the children killed or injured in the crash. The suits totaled $400,000. The first case tried was that of Mrs. Bessie Emerson, whose suit was for $25,000 for the death of her daughter, Pearl.

Birthday Fete Is Under Way At Dude Ranch

Milt Barrett and Others of Staff Congratulated; New Shows Open.

By Chanticleer.

"Happy birthday to you!"

That's for the Dude Ranch—and Milt Barrett, its genial host—and Dixie Dyer, its attractive mistress of ceremonies—and Ralph Garren and the band—and all the staff from kitchen to parking attendant.

For it's Milt Barrett's second birthday anniversary week, with souvenirs (those already well known umpty-gallon cowboy hats) and the presentation of Maestro Garren's enlarged band, now of 12 musicians.

And out in the backyard (not to be taken too literally) are the famous Dude Ranch chickens. The last two years have found many improvements made, including those acoustically treated walls and a very swank bandstand.

There's a Radio Variety Show at the Lotus every week with Bill Strickland presenting Grace Shannon, piano-playing vocalist, and the Three Harmonizers, a male trio heard on the airways frequently (led by Daniel Kaigle, jr.), this week. You can hear the show at home—but better, by far, is to be on hand and see how it's all done. Thursday nights, at midnight.

• • • •

Well, the shouting and tumult has all died down at Peter Borras' Restaurant Madrillon, but there'll be another birthday anniversary next year—and everyone now is pointing toward the long pull through this, the seventeenth year. But the new week is a glorious one, with a return engagement of the Ojedas and Sonia Meroff held over. There also is a pair of youthful trippers in some fast adagio numbers.

Four Bright Spots at the Supper Clubs This Week

sophisticated ditties, started her career as a show girl in the "Ziegfeld Follies." Then she shifted to a bit of drama in "The Sex Fable," thence to the musical version of "Smilin' Through" and then back again to "Lysistrata." She's studied voice in Vienna and knows the violin from stem to stern. She finally elected for her career the selling of tunes.

A brand-new show graces the La Paree floor beginning today—with the usual quota of dancing girls. Dee Clemmons and Charley Clift have been amply rewarded for their work on special band arrangements—even getting fan letters. The Easter vacation crowd is expected for the opening of the new floor show tonight.

Ralph, the Club Habana headwaiter, volunteers a bit of information on customs in the kitchen, that is if you have a kitchen of the size of a nightery or restaurant. Ralph advises that it is an unwritten law that the chef wears the highest, or tallest, hat. By that sign shall ye know him when you enter. Also, Dorothy, of the Habana's dance team, crochets between floor shows.

Dancing now at Brinkley's at 9:15 these evenings. Used to begin at 9:45. Jimmy Crandell is the newly appointed manager. Salute! and all that sort of thing, James. Gossip note: Maestro Mac, of the Brinkley Aces, reports that one of his boys used to wear curls down to his waist.

The blonde dancer at the Maryland Club Gardens this week is Frances Black. She's the gal who does those strange dances in the very aveldt costumes, with blue lights—and blue music. It's her first appearance at an after-dark spot. She's been vodvilling but she says the night-club floor is the theater in the final analysis, anyway.

One vote for the three hardest working entertainers in town: Pianist Sasha Bartnovsky, Violinist Sam Saxon and Accordionist Louis Soderlund—of the Troika. They form the trio that serenades between dance groups. Sam's real name is Simeon Saxonsky—and he knows his concert music. They know all the answers on ringside table requests.

On the Air Today

Little by little the pieces are fitting together as respects the future plans of Ed Wynn, his present sponsor, the sponsor of the old Wynn "Fire Chief" series, et al.

As originally chronicled, based on a report in New York, Wynn was expected to change nets in mid-May, to assume his old role of the "Fire Chief." This slight error was discovered yesterday when it developed that Wynn will continue at N. B. C. in his present role of "Gulliver."

But it didn't explain what was in the air in regard to plans of the one-time "Fire Chief" sponsor. Whenever a press agent raises smoke, there must be the inevitable fire. And in this case the smoke cleared away and we found the answer: The erstwhile "Fire Chief" and soon-to-end "Jumbo" sponsor brings Eddie Cantor to the airways next fall, supported by his present troupe of Jimmy Wallington, Bobby Breen, Parkyakarkus, the Mad Russian and Louis Gress.

No additional plans are revealed. It will be Cantor's sixth year in radio, part with N. B. C. and port with C. B. S. (where he continues until his contract expires May 10). His first appearance for his new sponsor is scheduled for mid-September. The summer will be spent in an extended vaudeville tour—and the making of a new picture.

At last I've found an acceptable definition for swing music: the playing of a song by skilled musicians who can so distort the melody that the listener alone has the pleasure of filling that element in!

Oddly enough, Red Nichols, who knows a thing or two himself about "hot" music, is the latest band maestro to rebel against swing music. He says its the bunk and that we'll all get back to sanity again when press agents find something else to plug.

Speaking of bands reminds me that the Earle presents Jan Garber and his orchestra, beginning today; the Fox has booked Ray Noble for an early appearance.

In a review of the funny men of the air, 1936 crop, the Associated Press observes that a comic may live an uncertain radio existence but he is well paid for it. The leaders, including Cantor, Benny, Burns and Allen, Wynn, Allen and Baker struggle through their half hour or hour periods at contractural stipends ranging from $10,000 per program down to a trifling $3,500. Which leads me to believe that being funny pays about as well as any other form of air talent—or perhaps much better.

Of course not all the so-called comics succeed on the air. For example, Joe Penner, George Givot and Jack Pearl. In the second flight, however, are found old familiar air names—artists who seem to have steady employment year in and out, to-wit: Pick and Pat (Molasses and January), Jim and Marian Jordan (Fibber McGee and Molly), Tom Howard and George Shelton, Walter O'Keefe, and Stoopnagle and Budd. Heigh ho, oh to be funny! J. H. H.

"Old Pine Tree"

The familiar voice of Arch McDonald, the "Old Pine Tree" of the sports announcing ranks, will be heard today for the first time in the new baseball season giving the play-by-play description of the Senators' first out-of-town game, Washington at Philadelphia, at 3 o'clock.

Each day this year, as was the case last season, Arch will provide WJSV listeners with full details of out-of-town games through the co-operation of The Washington Post and the Peoples Drug Co.

Culbertson on Bridge

Unnecessary Bids.

Bidding, being a form of conversation, is guided by the rules of rhetoric. Redundancy is inexcusable and, in the case of bidding, at least, it often is expensive. When either partner has given or extracted all the information he requires, there can be no point, when a slam is not contemplated, in showing a new and inferior suit. Such a course cannot benefit anyone but the opponents, who will be delighted to take full advantage of the information given them. In today's hand, East's defense of a vulnerable game contract was made comparatively simple by a completely unnecessary bid previously made by the declarer.

♣ J 9 8 2

SOUTH
♣ A 10 7 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 Diamond	Pass	1 spade	2 Hts. (1)
2 Spades	3 Hts.	4 Cls. (2)	Pass
4 Spades (final bid)

(1) Not a good vulnerable overcall.

(2) Since South has no serious slam aspirations, there is no point in showing the club suit.

West, on lead, decided he might jeopardize a possible club trick in partner's hand by opening his singleton and, anyway, it seemed likely that he had two natural trump tricks. So he led the jack of hearts. East won with the ace and took stock. It was apparent that only one heart trick was possible for his side, and probable that they would have to be content with one diamond trick, also. Where could he pick up the other two tricks necessary for the contract's defeat? Well, considering West's lack of heart tops, it was highly likely that he held a high spade honor, for quick control of the suit. Also, if South's four club bid had been based on a five-card suit (probable, since North-South were not using asking bids), West would have only one club. Therefore, the thing to do was to remove this club while West kept trump control and he, East, retained the diamond ace for entry. On this good reasoning, he led a club. Dummy won with the king an cashed the heart king for a diamond discard, after which the ace and another trump were played. West hopped up with his king, put East on lead with the diamond ace, and ruffed the club return, as per plan.

Inasmuch as East was a good player, it is quite possible that he would have used the same defensive plan had South not bid clubs. But it cannot be denied that South's bid made the defense much easier.

District Employment Shows 35% Increase

Private employment in Washington during March increased 35 per cent over February, it was announced yesterday by the District Public Employment Center.

Important gains were made by the industrial and building trades divisions, the hotel and restaurant division and the home and institutional service for colored women. Jobs placements during March, it was also reported, showed a 78 per cent gain over the same period in 1935.

Roosevelt Action On Airport Sought

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said yesterday he will seek an audience with President Roosevelt regarding appointments of three members of the nine-man District airport site commission.

The President, after signing the measure passed by both Houses of Congress this week, is required to name three members who will be associated with three Senators and three Representatives.

While expressing hope that the commission will be able to make its recommendations to Congress before adjournment, Senator King said he does not believe that it will be possible in view of the lateness of the session.

'Red Rider' Foes To Plan Campaign

Proponents of the Sisson bill to repeal the "anti-red rider" to the 1936 District appropriations act will map a plan of campaign at a caucus early next week, Representative Kennedy, chairman of the sub-committee, which conducted the hearings, said yesterday.

Members who have expressed an active interest in the passage of the bill will be invited to the meeting.

Kennedy explained that the committee wants to offset any filibuster by an organized defense so that the House may have a chance to vote on the bill the day it is called up, April 27. He said he believes there will be no necessity for a special rule, as was the case with the rent bill.

'Rhodes' Given Premiere Last Evening at Met

By Nelson B. Bell.

"RHODES, THE EMPIRE BUILDER," Gaumont British picturization of the book by Sarah Gertrude Millin, adapted to the screen by Leslie Arliss and Michael Barringer, with dialogue by Miles Malleson, starring Walter Huston, with Oscar" Homolka, Basil Sydney, Frank Cellier, Peggy Ashcroft, Renee de Vaux, Bernard Lee, Lewis Casson, Glennis Lorimer and Ndanisa Kumalo, of Matabeleland. Directed by Berthold Viertel. Previewed Monday, April 13.

There is wide sweep to the drama that is revealed in this pictorial biography of the man who carved an empire for Britain out of the wilderness of South Africa. There would be even greater power and appeal in "Rhodes, the Empire Builder," had a greater proportion of its footage been devoted to a more minute study of the man himself than of the towering events in which he was the motive force.

The picture, disclosed for the first time in Washington before a distinguished audience at a special premiere showing in the Metropolitan Theater last night at 8:30, for instance, fails to make clear that Cecil John Rhodes was only 16 years of age when he left his native England—one of a family of 12 children and the son of a clergyman—to seek new scenes and new conquests in an undeveloped land; that he accomplished the successful consolidation of the South African States from Matabeleland to the Cape in the ensuing three decades and died of a heart attack when only 48, a few months before the end of the Boer War made sure the consummation of plans to which his life had been dedicated.

From Diamonds to Death.

What the film does concern itself with is the finding of diamonds in Kimberley, when a farmer discovers a lad playing marbles with a bit of "stone" worth several hundred pounds; the dominance of the diamond trade by Rhodes when he outmaneuvered Barney Barnato and made him second in command, more through social pressure than commercial argument; the conquest of Matabeleland, to the north, under the leadership of his friend, Jameson, and the uncrowned dictator's clashes with Paul Kruger, president of the Boer Republic, and what came of them. His death closes the story.

Through all of these stirring intervals of the picture's development, Walter Huston, in the title role, moves with a simple directness and quiet dignity that are said by those who should know to reflect an accurate portrait of the man who rests in a grave of granite on a mountain top in the land he conquered and loved. As has been stated in these columns on an earlier date, the striking resemblance of the aging Rhodes, in the closing sequences of the film, to Ramsay MacDonald, former prime minister of England, is a trifle disconcerting. Huston makes no attempt to assume either the face or the figure of the man he impersonates.

Homolka Plays Kruger.

Not so Oscar Homolka, who appears in the role of "Oom Paul" Kruger. This sterling Viennese actor exercises an even greater economy of speech and action than his American associate, and in so doing lends the figure of the Boer president impressive qualities of patriotic fervor and sagacious statecraft. These attributes are largely dissipated, however, when Kruger rebuffs the petitioners who later turn their support to Rhodes and so writes the preface to his own undoing.

A feminine character in the story—a novelist who injects casual touches of the philosophy of government by combatting most of Rhodes' major acts—is played without too much conviction or forcefulness by Peggy Ashcroft, the only important distaff member of the cast, barring the excellent portrayal of Mrs. Kruger, offered by Renee de Vaux.

Among the supporting players, Basil Sydney, as Jameson, contributes an effective study of an impatient subordinate and Ndanisa Kumalo, the Matabele chieftain, from whom Rhodes won concessions that Kruger's emissaries could not secure, delivers himself of many emphatic speeches in his native tongue—quite as picturesque a lingo as you would expect.

African Scenes Realistic.

There are occasional scenes of thrilling suspense in the tribal lands of the African natives, but the most dramatic incidents in the picture are those participated in by Rhodes and Kruger, when one senses the clash of two indomitable wills. The Boer War, perhaps for political reasons, is skimmed over by merest implication—much as it was in "Cavalcade"—conveyed by no more than a subtitle, and the narrative then reverts to Rhodes and the suffering of his last hours.

"Rhodes, the Empire Builder," dealing as it does with imposing character and heroic achievement, is a drama of deliberate development and slowly cumulative effect, centering in two antagonistic and overpowering figures. With all of its honesty of purpose and conscientious effort on the part of all concerned, I still am of the conviction that it does not quite strike the fire it should. The enthusiasm of last night's audience places me in a distinct minority.

Being of normal feature length, "Rhodes, the Empire Builder" is supplemented by a short-reel subject devoted to Ramon Ramos' Rainbow Orchestra, a Technicolor "Merry Melody" cartoon comedy, "Let It Be Me," and the combined Paramount and Universal newsreels.

About The Showshops

DARRYL ZANUCK, vice president of Twentieth Century-Fox in charge of production, once more has dragged up that old question of "when is a star not a star?"

Mr. Zanuck, one of the craftiest of his craft, is of the opinion that there are not more than a dozen or so authentic stars in the entire Hollywood film colony. "But," says he, "about 1,200 people are called stars. A star, as I see it, is someone who can draw 2,000,000 cash customers to the box office and do it on his own personal magnetism, without a necessarily great story or an army of popular supporting players."

BELL.

At least Mr. Zanuck knows what a star is. Measured by that yardstick, however, it is pointed out by Relman Morin, a cagey observer of the West Coast scene for the Associated Press, about the only legitimate, blown-in-the-bottle (figurative only, you understand!) stars in Hollywood are Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire (as a team), Mae West, Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Joe E. Brown, Jim Cagney and Dick Powell. All these have a 2,000,000-customer-power draw, so their studios say.

This is more or less in consonance with the last popularity polls that were taken recently among thousands of theater operators throughout the country. Then the tiny Miss Temple was the "biggest" star, "The Littlest Rebel" having returned $1,100,000 to Mr. Zanuck's coffers in the first five weeks following its release. Oh, to be a coffer! The fabulous Greta Garbo was forty-fourth on this list and Marlene Dietrich even farther down the line—but this voting did not take into consideration their tremendous popularity abroad.

It all seems to come down to the fact that if your favorite actor or actress turns out not to be a "star," maybe you can continue to struggle along with the talents of some 50-odd capable featured and leading players.

But it would be nice if all the producing companies could dig up a Shirley Temple for themselves. It is she who seems to be the real "Temple of the Muses."

The irrepressible Master Hardie Meakin, manager of the RKO-Keith Theater, directs attention to the fact that RKO-Radio's picturization of Maxwell Anderson's drama of "Mary of Scotland," in which Helen Hayes scored so substantially on the stage, probably will be the first picture ever made with the active co-operation of four winners of the Academy award. Dudley Nichols, writer, and John Ford, director, won the Academy's golden statuettes this year for their work on "The Informer." Katharine Hepburn, who is playing the Hayes role on the screen, was similarly honored for her work in "Morning Glory," and Fredric March, who plays the role created by Philip Merivale on the boards, won the coveted honor with his performance in "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." It was quite by chance that this distinguished quartet was assembled for the making of "Mary of Scotland," for the engagements were made before Nichols and Ford had received the Academy's accolade.

The blonde Miss Benay Venuta, who co-headlines the vaudeville bill at Loew's Fox with Jimmy Savo, beginning today, has had quite a career for a young woman only in her 20s. Born in San Francisco, she moved later to Los Angeles and, while still a student in the Hollywood High School, appeared in a ballet at Sid Grauman's Egyptian Theater. Following her graduation she toured for a time with a Fanchon & Marco unit. Then she spent two years at a finishing school at Beaupre, Switzerland.

On her return to America she thought she would take a whirl at pictures, but succeeded in securing only minor singing "bits." Dissatisfied with this as an outlet for her artistic urge, she became a staff vocalist and writer at Radio Station KFRC in San Francisco, singing between studio tricks at the smart Embassy Club. In New York she won a Columbia Broadcasting System audition and has been going great, guns ever since, in a manner of speaking. She was here earlier in the season as leading woman with Billy Gaxton and Victor Moore in "Anything Goes." Her picture adorned this page yesterday—which should have been today. So now you know.

Hollywood

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, April 15.

Caesar Romera, between dances at the Trocadero, tells of a flicker flaw in "Follow the Fleet." Caesar claims there is a boner in the sequence in which Fred Astaire is seen lighting a cigar. For Randolph Scott enters the room a few minutes later, takes the cigar from Astaire's mouth and throws it on a table near-by. Yet a few minutes later, when the table is in view, a new cigar, unused, is seen there. Romero says: "That's what you mean by a movie boner, isn't it?"

ASTAIRE.

Yes, Caesar Romero is now a member of the Movie Boners' Club as well as the Club Trocadero.

Merle Oberon says she saw the flicker "The Lady Consents," and when Margaret Lindsay and Herbert Marshall go to lunch, a front view of Miss Lindsay shows her unfolding a napkin. She is having a conversation with Marshall. The camera changes to another view. Miss Lindsay is continuing her conversation, but is unfolding another napkin. Welcome to the clubhouse, Merle.

• • • •

Blanche Yurka, who starred in a big movie boner previously, writes: "All I can say in answer to Miss Werro's comment on my knitting 'boner' in 'Tale of Two Cities,' is practically nil. Learning to knit in a transcontinental plane is not the ideal way. I suppose she would hate to have me knit her a sweater. I actually did knit an emerald green sports coat, which has proven very handy for cleaning the car. Heigh-ho—L'Art—L'Art. What demands it makes." . . . The club permits them to have their say.

• • • •

Now for the movie fans and their boners. Warner Baxter in "Robin Hood of El Dorado," is told that the ammunition is running low, writes John Patricola. Ann Loring hears this and rushes over to the ammunition shack. Baxter sees her and follows. But before reaching the shack, he plunges into the stream. "Of course," adds Patricola, "getting himself wet. Yet when Baxter arrives in the shack, he is dry. I don't understand how Baxter got dry so quickly. Perhaps it is because of California's dry weather and dry water."

Michael Muli writes: "I have seen quite a number of pictures and talk about your boners. In the flicker 'Branded a Coward,' the girl, Billie Seward, is riding in the stagecoach and the driver gets shot. Miss Seward gets out of the coach to help him. She has low-heeled shoes on. When they get into town, Miss Seward is wearing high-heeled shoes."

• • • •

In the flicker "Colleen," Ruby Keeler is advised by a gentleman to call him at Bowling Green 3-5700 if she decides to take over the gown shop on the S. S. Atlantis, claims Lawrence Beinhacker. Later, Ruby Keeler phones that number. "Having worked on lower Broadway, and having a Bowling Green phone number," says Beinhacker, "I am quite positive that Bowling Green is 9 and not 3."

Marlene Dietrich in "Desire," says Harold Barnes, is chased through a Spanish town by policemen on American motorcycles with American sirens on them. It must be a new Spanish custom.

• • • •

Phil Regan in the flicker "Laughing Irish Eyes," is in an office talking to the radio announcer and, writes Albert Gorkowitz, "the collar on his shirt is button-down style. Regan's next appearance is at the steamship office, and when he is talking to Evelyn Knapp, his collar is not button-down style. He takes a cab to the Garden, and in the dancing room he is again wearing a plain collar. Maybe he changed his shirt in the cab?" Say, what do you want from Regan? He's a nice fellow. He'd give you the shirt off his back.

Utopia Seekers, In Need, Aided By Cuba Group

Virgin Islands 'Heaven' Hunters' to Be Moved to Havana.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, April 17.—The Anglo-American Association, a charitable organization, said today it had arranged with railroad companies to bring a group of American "utopia seekers," stranded in Pinar del Rio Province, to Havana.

The small auxiliary schooner, the Fleetwood, which left Key West, Fla., March 5 for the Virgin Islands, was in Cortes Bay, Pinar del Rio, with most of the passengers and crew aboard.

The adventurers took shelter there when storms drove them off their course after they had left Matanzas, Cuba, March 28 for St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, where they sought a "heaven."

Maurice Allard, head of the group which called itself the "Vana Vana" Society, was in Havana and called at the American consulate. United States Consul General C. R. Cameron said he could not disclose the nature of their talk. Allard also tried to communicate with friends in the Virgin Islands to obtain assistance.

The Anglo-American Association stated funds had been advanced to Allard's followers to bring them to the Cuban capital.

In telephone messages to Pinar del Rio City, residents of Puerto Cortez, near which the Fleetwood lay, said the party was short of food and fuel. The ship had lost most of its sails in storms.

The expedition has had trouble ever since it started out. It had to return to Key West on its first departure to get an experienced navigator. Then when the Fleetwood put in at Matanzas about 20 days later, Allard said the group was short of food and supplies and had been adrift for days.

Quarry Workers Union Upheld After Inquiry

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 16.—A finding against the Standard Lime & Stone Co. was made by Trial Examiner J. D. Moore, in his report today to the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, as a result of hearings here in mid-March upon complaints of the local branch of the Quarry Workers Union.

The examiners' report recommended that the company discharge all production employes not on its rolls on June 17, 1935, and reinstate to the vacancies those still without jobs comparable to their old positions as a result of the strike which started at the plant on April 24, 1935. Those pleading guilty to illegal acts in connection with the strike may not be reinstated.

Attorneys for the company here today withheld announcement of plans concerning the report.

Searchers Delay Hunt For Drowned Seamen

Annapolis, April 16 (AP).—High winds and rough water today forced sailors at the Naval Academy to discontinue their search for the body of Seaman Joseph Partacz, 26, who fell into the Severn River while helping to lay out the coruse for the Navy-Columbia crew race Saturday.

Partacz, whose home was in Cleveland, Ohio, is the second sailor from the U. S. S. Reina Mercedes, station ship at the academy, to be drowned while working on thec rew course. The first drowning occurred two years ago.

The search for partacz's body will be resumed as soon as the water subsides.

3 File Suits Charging Union Broke Promises

Staunton, Va., April 16 (AP).—Suits for $10,500 damages, growing out of a labor dispute here in February-March, 1935, were filed in Corporation Court today by three former employes of L. Grief & Brother's manufacturing plants against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The complainants, Mrs. A. D. Kiser, of near Ralla; Mrs. Frances Parish and Mrs. Rosa Pryor, both of near Staunton, charged the union had "completely repudiated a promise" to pay wages to employes discharged from the plants because of union membership.

Winchester Presbytery Elects New Moderator

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 16.—The Rev. G. H. Rector, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., was chosen moderator of Winchester (Va.) Presbytery at its opening business session of the two-day meeting, which started this morning at Bunker Hill Presbyterian Church. He succeeds the Rev. Harry Crimm, of Strasburg, Va., who delivered the opening sermon as retiring moderator.

The Rev. C. F. Poole, of Romney, W. Va., was chosen reading clerk for the session. Approximately 100 ministers and delegate elders are attending the sessions.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

An opportunity for thousands of patronage employes, unemployed and workers in private industry to obtain a civil service status is found in the new stenographic and typist examinations announced yesterday by Civil Service Commission.

BAKER.

Four classes of examinations will be given, applications for which must be on file with Civil Service Commission not later than May 4. The tests are:

Senior stenographer, $1,620; junior stenographer, $1,440; senior typist, $1,440 and junior typist, $1,260 a year. The age limits are 18 to 53 except in cases of military or naval preference. The examinations are for appointment in Washington only.

In the last stenographic and typist tests two years ago, 66,433 persons competed. However, only 16,684 passed and were placed on the eligible lists. These examinations included appointments in the field.

Since the last tests of this type more than 38,000 persons have written to Civil Service Commission, asking when another examination would be given and requesting notification.

Examinations in the technical class also are announced as follows: Junior cotton technologist, $2,000; senior scientific aid (color technology), $2,000, and junior scientific aid, $1,440 a year, for service in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The closing date for filing applications is May 6.

Additional information on these and other examinations may be obtained at Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

Austin Beall (C), Duplicating, HOLC, is grooming the Phi Sigma Kappa debating team for its next match in the George Washington University interfraternity debating contest.

Speaks in Kansas City.

Miss Lucy M. Alexander, associate food specialist, Bureau of Home Economics, Wednesday addressed the American Chemical Society at Kansas City, Mo., on modern methods of cooking meat.

Meat cooking, she said, is keeping up with the machine age, and results of roasting control worked out by food specialists of the bureau show that shrinkage can be cut while the product, finished for the platter, is just what the cook wants it to be. Temperature control is the secret, she holds, and this is now easy to get with modern ovens and meat thermometers, mechanical aids of the kitchen.

Howard R. Wilson (P), Bureau of Public Roads, is reported to have been promoted this month to the position of senior administrative officer, a post formerly held by E. R. Miller, who resigned March 31.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C appears after your name call on the Federal Diary editor in person today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. Dr. Rogers on Health.

"Every day should be Child Health Day," says Dr. James F. Rogers, consultant in hygiene and health education specialist, Office of Education, Interior, in connection with the program marking May Day as Child Health Day.

Dr. Rogers points out, however, that the setting apart of May 1 for special emphasis on this subject by schools and other organizations interested in child welfare has helped to make better care of the child continuous throughout the year.

Special material for use by schools in the celebration May 1, prepared by Miss Anne Whitney (F), former director of health education in the American Child Health Association, is available through the National Education Association.

Q.—Have motion pictures been taken of any of the WPA activities? —Elizabeth J. Kramer (F).

A.—The camera record section of the Works Progress Administration recently disclosed plans to present motion-picture shorts of WPA work and of other relief agencies. They plan to prepare a series of 6-minute films giving the highlights of CWA, FERA and WPA in practically every State, as well as of Nation-wide activities. Four motion-picture cameramen have been at work for WPA since it was first started, and they have taken about 150,000 feet of film, in addition to many thousands of still pictures. Although it is planned to deposit these in the Federal Archives as a permanent record of relief work, some of them are available free of cost to news reel concerns and to theaters. WPA officials say that film already taken will be sufficient for the State series planned, but one cameraman is being retained to take special shots for the national shorts, which will show WPA accomplishments in public health, aviation, archeology, recreation and conservation.

What has happened to Tommy Manville? Haven't heard from him in days . . . I wanted to tell him that there are three Marriage Brokers listed in the Red Book . . . I just called one of them on the phone, to find out what was the market price on a blonde widow, with a lot of money, for a friend . . . The girl at the Marriage Broker's office was very chilly . . . "You will have to come here in person. We do not discuss the business over the phone," she said, and hung up . . . I'm going to suggest it to Jack Benny for one of his radio programs . . . Set the entire action in a Marriage Broker's office, with Mary Livingstone as the telephone girl . . . That ought to be funny . . . If it isn't, he can sue me.

MANVILLE.

This is one of those days where nothing goes right . . . The garage just called to say that the car had collapsed at Sixty-sixth street and Lexington avenue . . . It seems the clutch has slipped out of its socket, and the ignition has quit . . . Makes no sense to me . . . Living in a machine age, I know nothing of machinery . . . Don't know why the car should act up like this anyhow . . . It has been well fed and housed . . . Ingratitude, that's all . . . But the lady who is sitting in the apartment house across the street, from where I'm typewriting, knows nothing of these headaches . . . She is an angular lady, in a white woolen sweater and she is knitting . . . Every now and then, she looks up from her needles, scratches under her nose reflectively and then goes back to her knitting . . . She does the whole thing in tempo, 5 minutes of knitting, a 10-second nose scratch and then the needles start flying again . . . I'll bet she'd be startled if she looked over here and saw me thumbing my nose at her.

• • • •

The garage just called again . . . It will cost $3 to tow the car back . . . Don't know if I have that much money left in the checking account, because this noon I had to make out a check for the State income tax . . . Why couldn't the car have broken down close to the garage, say $1 worth away from it . . . Down on the street now, a glazier has set up his stepladder and is puttering away at the glass window of a shop on the corner . . . He hardly has climbed his ladder before another man joins him, and I can follow their conversation in pantomime . . . The newcomer is a kibitzer, the kind of a fellow who stands behind you at card games and mutters to himself . . . But it's the first time I knew glaziers had kibitzers, too . . . This guy must be a specialist . . . Wonder how many miles of glass there are in New York City? . . . This is a problem for the statisticians who lay things end-to-end and who figure out how the Queen Mary would compare with the Empire State Building if the ship were built up and down, instead of from left to right . . . Oldest glaziers in the city are at the Morris Glass Co., downtown . . . It was founded in 1837, six years before the first telegraph line was operated between Baltimore and Washington.

• • • •

Interesting to paw through the Red Book and see the various things which men hit upon to make a living . . . There is one firm that dyes beads . . . Three firms do nothing but break concrete blocks . . . Another one repairs coffee mills . . . There is another firm dedicated to the manufacture of caskets for pet animals . . . Still another that specializes in canned mushrooms . . . There is a man listed as a color counsellor, and one firm devoted to castor oil, of all things . . . Ten firms handle peat moss . . . You meet a lot of interesting people in the classified telephone directory . . . But I wonder how a fellow decides to make lamp shade bindings . . . That must take a lot of thought and planning.

• • • •

The garage just called again . . . The spark plugs need a bit of cleaning . . . It's okay with me, boys . . . Shoot the works . . . The lady who was knitting in the window across the street has taken a runout powder . . . Maybe she got tired of the whole damn thing . . . The revolt of a knitter is a terrible thing . . . They go along, year after year, knitting doo-dads and then comes the revolution . . . An acrobatic dancer once confessed to me that her work got very monotonous, too . . . "Standing on your head, looking at people upside down is very boring," she said . . . It must be . . . It is boring enough, sometimes, to look at people right side up . . . I'll bet that the Radio City Rockettes get tired of kicking in unison, night after night, year after year . . . Some night, one of them will kick over the traces and kick out of step, just for the hell of it, a rebel against regimentation.

Flowers and congratulations will greet Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau this morning in recognition of their twentieth wedding anniversary. There will be no special festivities at the Morgenthau home, however, as they are in mourning. Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau have won real popularity in Washington. Their handsome home is considered one of the most important social centers of the official set of this Administration.

Mrs. Morgenthau belongs to the coterie of women who worked with Mrs. Roosevelt, not only in political campaigns in New York State but also in her educational and philanthropic activities. When Mrs. Roosevelt came to the White House and her interests became of a more national character, Mrs. Morgenthau gave her the same type of assistance in these. The wife of the Secretary of the Treasury frequently accompanies the First Lady on her tours of inspection of Government projects.

Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau were married in New York City April 17, 1916. They have three children, Henry, Robert Morris and Joan.

It is good news to many Washingtonians that Hildegarde Hamilton, in private life Mrs. Hobart Ryland, wife of the head of the romance department of the University of Kentucky, and a renowned artist in her own right, will visit Washington next month en route to Montenegro, where she will pass the summer in painting.

Mrs. Ryland comes here to arrange for a one-man show she plans in this city next November on her return. Prof. Ryland and her two children, Hildegarde and Hamilton Ryland, will accompany her abroad.

Mrs. Albert James Wins Poetry Award From Pen Women

Mrs. Albert E. James, of Chevy Chase, who writes under the name of Ida Elaine James, was winner of the poetry award of the National League of American Pen Women, in session here, on her quatrain, "Hope," and Mrs. Charles Mirick, whose pen name is Edith Mirick, won a similar award on her sonnet, "Return to Eden." Both winners are members of the Washington branch of the league.

The awards were announced at the luncheon of the Pen Women Wednesday, at which Harold Vinal, noted poet, who judged the poems, was guest of honor. Victoria Faber Stevenson, president of the league, and Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, also were honored guests. Mrs. Charles C. Tyler, who writes as Inez Sheldon Tyler, was in charge of the program for the poetry section of the convention.

Mrs. James, who has won other poetry awards, is Maryland State president of the American Poetry Circle and has had poems published recently in 23 current magazines. Mrs. Mirick is known both as a poet and critic of poetry and was editor of the poetry magazine "Star Dust," which no longer is published.

Mrs. Van Hagan to Give Review at Shoreham

Mrs. Lydia Van Hagen will present the seventh of ten reviews, "World Events as Reflected in Current Literature," at 11:30 this morning in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

"My Country and My People," by Lin Yutang, and "The Lost Generation," by Maxine Davis, will be discussed in detail and two new novels will be reviewed briefly. Miss Davis will be present to answer questions about her study of American youth.

The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Bennet Crain, the Rev. Tagart Steele, of St. David's Episcopal Church, officiating. Mr. Cheney will give his stepdaughter in marriage, and a reception will follow the ceremony.

Miss Sarah Richards to Be Bride of Son of Former Governor.

An engagement of equal interest to society in Washington, New York and Pittsburgh is thatof Mr. Gifford Pinchot, jr., son of former Gov. and Mrs. Pinchot, and Miss Sarah H. Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Richards, of New York, which has been announced by her parents.

He is a nephew of Mr. Amos Pinchot and a cousin of the late Lady Johnstone, wife of the late Sir Alan Johnstone, former British Minister to Denmark and Holland. Mr. Pinchot was graduated from the Thacher School in California and is now studing medicine at Yale.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Food Fads.

One of the worst of the food fads is that which loads the digestive tract with great quantities of roughage—usually in an attempt to reduce weight or to relieve constipation. We must not forget that man is not a grass-eating animal and that the human digestive apparatus cannot dissolve an appreciable amount of cellulose (vegetable fiber).

Constipation often leads either to the adoption of a diet containing an excess of cellulose or to the use of cathartics, many of which may make the condition worse. People differ as to habit, but it is not absolutely essential that the colon shall be emptied each day.

Every general diet should contain well cooked fresh vegetables, but in the presence of an irritable colon it may be necessary to strain or pulp them.

Fruits, Salads Are Reducers.

Fruits and salads form a part of almost every reducing diet and are valuable as such. But we cannot make up our entire menu from these materials, inasmuch as they are lacking in too many food essentials.

Reducing diets that are composed largely of milk and milk products lead to a type of starvation which is attended, in the largest percentage of cases, with an obstinate constipation.

Another fad which is harmful to many is the no-breakfast or no-lunch habit.

All meals should be taken regularly and without hurry. Large meals are likely to distend the stomach unduly and place an excess load on the liver and the digestive functions in general. The four-meal schedule is far closer to nature's scheme of things than the two-meal plan. If three meals is your habit, stick to it, but balance them in quantity so that breakfast will be between one-third and one-half in bulk and nutrition that of the heaviest meal; the noon meal may be even a bit lighter than breakfast unless one's occupation calls for considerable muscular activity.

Bolting Food Injurious.

The American habit of bolting food—satisfying hunger in ten minutes—not only invites the swallowing of air which distends the stomach, but prevents an intimate mixing of the food with the gastric secretions.

Many people consider meat harmful. They believe that it causes high blood pressure, kidney disease, and a host of other ills; hence the rise of the so-called vegetarian diet. The fact is that when properly prepared meat is one of our best foods, and roasting is the most desirable method of preparation.

To Wear in Leisure Hours

Speaking eloquently of 11 a. m. leisure and luxury is the redingote negligee such as the one shown above. The full coat is of dusky old rose chiffon and the slinky satin slip with its flattering cowl neck of pearl white satin. Full sleeves pulled in at the wrist, loosely gathered drapes down the front to the bouquet fastening, and a graceful train are just a few of the features that make this negligee "dangerously feminine." For the name of the store where it may be purchased, call Frances Mangum, The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, Extension 323.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Man Who Gambles Is Poor Risk as Husband; Mail-Order Match-Making Is Never to Be Recommended.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am 25 years old. For one year I have been keeping company with a man much older than I. He is about 35. He says he loves me and has been more than nice to me. Ever since I met him he has insisted on seeing me every night and thinks me very inconsiderate if I see other fellows. However, he has never mentioned marriage to me and I think it is selfish and unfair of him to monopolize my time entirely when he really "means me no good," as I have heard my mother say so often.

Mary Haworth.

* * * *

I cannot understand him. He says he cannot afford to marry, but he makes good money and often loses over $100 at a time gambling. Last week I disappointed him by seeing someone else. Then I wrote to him explaining that we could be friends, but nothing more. I have heard nothing from him since. I miss him, but I do think I did right. What do you think about it? TEACHER.

* * * *

DEAR TEACHER: I think you did the commonsense thing. The man may love you a little, after his fashion, but it seems apparent that he loves himself and his own freedom of action a great deal more. If you never hear from him again you will be well rid of him. It is often necessary to purchase future well being with the coin of present pain. A man who gambles is never a good risk as a husband, even when he declares himself a candidate for a woman's hand, and a man who tells a woman he loves her and preempts all her time, without giving any further evidence of serious intention, should be regarded as an irresponsible heartbreaker and shunned as such. M. H.

"Philosopher's" Affinity?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: In your column of April 7 you printed a letter from a man who signed himself "Philosopher." He proposed to be seeking a woman of almost unattainable perfections for his wife, yet he has described exactly a person I have known for years. She meets every single one of his requirements, except that she lives in Baltimore instead of Washington. But that, of course, is a small matter when one takes into consideration all the other things he ("Philosopher") mentions. It is a strange coincidence, too, that she has often said she would marry no man other than one having his exact qualifications.

* * * *

I might have answered his letter before, except that I have been visiting in Baltimore the past week. I always read your column and I am very eager to hear what you have to say to this coincidence. It would be rather wonful if these two could meet, wouldn't it? Sincerely yours, PHILOSOPHER'S FRIEND.

* * * *

DEAR FRIEND: The appearance here of "Philosopher's" letter has already occasioned the receipt by this department of a goodly number of letters and telephone calls from Washington women who presumably see in themselves a remarkable likeness to that hypothetical woman he would make his wife. Therefore, it is without astonishment that I learn another such woman exists in the even larger City of Baltimore.

* * * *

I would not even hazard a guess as to how wonderful it might be if these two persons should meet—your friend in Baltimore and Mr. Philosopher. The meeting might be a great success, resulting in a truly happy romance; or it might be one of the most dismal failures ever recorded in the field of match-making efforts. I personally am inclined to distrust entirely the wisdom and worth of mail-order match-making. M. H.

'Real Washingtonian' Speaks.

MISS HAWORTH: Your answer to "Philosopher" and the letter from "G. A. M.," the girl with the free telephone number, is a scream. If you know what I mean. Any girl who isn't woman enough to go out and find the man of her dreams instead of giving her telephone number out to a man she doesn't even know . . . is a darn fool . . .

I am a girl not in the least attractive nor very cultured, but I have a high school education and sense enough to know how to get a man of my own choice without the help of a want-ad column. I am rather stout and not in the least what the fellows call a good-loking girl. I dance and can see a joke at any time. I don't pet nor do I smoke or drink, but I am far from being a prude.

* * * *

Please tell that girl that if she has any attributes at all to put them in full force and she will be bound to get a man. The right kind, too. Tell her to wear the most becoming frocks she can afford and to wear her hair the most attractive way she can, and, above all, to be a good sport. She doesn't have to smoke or pet to be one, either. Tell her to try being herself for a while and see if that doesn't work.

* * * *

I am a real Washingtonian and I know competition. You know there are about five women to every man here. But I have plenty of dates because I am willing to be just myself.

Well, Happy Easter to you, Mary Haworth, and if you think I'm fresh I'm glad of it. Tell "G. A. M." to be a really good woman and get out and find a man herself and not to use the telephone call at all. Pick-ups are hardly ever what a real lady would do, anyway. It is picking him up, you know.

* * * *

P. S.: I'll wait to see if you have the nerve to publish this, because I realize it is not in the least complimentary; but it isn't meant to be complimentary, and if you will excuse the errors and be a good scout I'll wait to read it in your column and find out how fresh I am. Thanks. So long. K. M. T. G.

* * * *

DEAR K. M. T. G.: Your comment is amusing in its cheerful impudence and self-satisfaction. As for its being "not in the least complimentary," we who write columns are always pleased to have any comment from readers, approving or otherwise. Brickbats and bouquets are accepted with equal composure. Happy Easter to you, K. M. T. G. M. H.

Miss Shoemaker Sees Beauty Passing, Fascination Enduring

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"A FASCINATING WOMAN is remembered long after her more beautiful sisters are forgotten."

Thus Dora Adele Shoemaker, of the National School of Elocution and Oratory, of Philadelphia, yesterday encouraged women who are more lovable than lovely, and sounded a note of warning to those prone to depend entirely on their looks.

Miss Shoemaker arrived in Washington Wednesday. Yesterday afternoon she talked at a convention meeting of the League of American Pen Women on "The Soul of Speech." Earlier in the day, in her room at the Willard, she divulged some of her ideas on feminine fascination and told why the ability to speak effectively is a requisite to the pleasing personality of both men and women.

Bachrach.

DORA ADELE SHOEMAKER.

Speech Alluring Asset.

"In social life direct, dignified, delightful speech is a gracious and alluring asset that leads to popularity and success," she said. "In business speech is a toool that helps anyone carve his way to the top. A clear, convincing, unaffected manner of expressing oneself is invaluable to every man or woman in the business or professional world."

She further pointed out that anyone who would be an impressive speaker should learn the art of listening as well as of talking. "The average woman has a tendency to talk too much and say too little," she continued. "The ability to listen sympathetically is a rare talent. Most of us could profit by practicing the pause more often than we do."

In this connection she defined good speaking as "the maximum of thought and a minimum of words." She mentioned that sought-after speakers of the past talked loud and long, said little, and still managed to entertain their audiences; "but today, the picture has changed," she added. "You must have a message and an effective way of presenting it in order to have anyone to listen."

Urges Proper Preparation.

Nervous tension, self-consciousness, raucous voices and faulty enunciation are the chief obstructions to effective vocal expression, in her opinion. "Proper preparation will remove these and will show any normal woman how to gain poise and personal magnetism," she said.

Convinced any woman can master the technique of effective speaking, Miss Shoemaker believes this is "largely a matter of removing obstructions, already mentioned, and learning how to synchronize thought with emotion."

In the case of the woman public speaker, dress must also come in for its share of attention. "Simplicity should be the keynote of your attire," she averred. "Your costume should not be too definite in cut or in color, else your audience's attention will tend to be fastened on it instead of what you say. Personally, I prefer a dress with a draped effect, of subdued shade and simple in style."

Creation Is Essential.

Touching on some other subjects in the course of her interview, Miss Shoemaker said she strongly believes "Creation in some form is essential to the happiness of everyone. A child is, of course, woman's highest type of creation. If she has no offspring, she must direct her creative instinct into other channels or suffer the dire results of frustration.

"Some women find a medium of creative expression in art, music or writing; others realize it in model home making or organization work or even in social activity. But whatever a woman chooses as her medium ability as a speaker will help her."

Miss Shoemaker herself has turned her creative talent to teaching others to express themselves effectively and in writing plays and poetry. Her volume of verse, "Out O' Doors" was published in 1932. Her plays have been produced, not only in the school established by her parents in 1874, but throughout the country.

Letter Writing

WHERE DO WORDS hide themselves when you want to write a letter? They just seems to vanish into the air, if you've never won for yourself that social life-saver, a bright vocabulary!

You've had a delightful week-end, with hikes after spring flowers, the companionship of charming people. For this warm hospitality you send a bread-and-butter note. And what trite, tiresome words get onto the paper; "A dandy time," "Certainly was swell of you," "I sure thought it was nice."

Where were those just-right phrases, "I can still smell the spring woods," and "What a delicious, laughing person your Kathie is!"

And those cordial, kindly wishes to the new bride or the greetings which keep you in touch with old friends, or condolences to some one newly bereaved. Do they come out as colorless "Our best wishes" and "Sorry to hear of your loss?"

When you get into this can't-write state of mind wouldn't it help a lot to glance at some brisk, lively, correct, sample letters? And to check up on some common errors, and on letter etiquette?

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Hired to impersonate June, beautiful young step sister of Jim Bradley, Ruth Dayton finds herself in love with her make believe brother. The impersonation was the idea of Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim. They had hired Ruth to go with them to Chicago to the bedside of Jim when he was thought to be dying after an auto accident. June, they said, was ill and could not go. Jim was blinded by the crash and would not know of the deceit.

Arrived in Chicago, however, a series of events leads Ruth to suspect that Joe and Clara are eager to bring about Jim's death. She is convinced that Pascoe, a man nurse hired by Bradley, is in the plot. Ruth's only hope for help appears to be Bette, Clara Bradley's maid. Bette covets a dress that Ruth has.

Chapter XIV.

"I'll just think it over, Bette," Ruth said. "I'll have to wear the dress a time or two, or they'll notice. But after all—"

"So you're afraid of them, too?" Bette asked suddenly.

Ruth took a long chance. Did she dare confide in this girl even just a little? "Well, I'll admit I don't quite understand them. Do you?"

Bette nodded emphatically. "Sure, I undestand them. Everything for themselves. That's what they want. Sure, I understand."

"Been with them long, Bette?"

"Four or five years this last time. She's good pay—Mrs. Bradley is—and she's generous enough giving away her old things but, Lordy, she's got a temper. I see you've heard something about her temper, too?" Bette was looking straight at the bruise on Ruth's temple.

"She threw a book at me," Ruth confessed, "because she got angry at me."

Bette nodded. "She's thrown more than books at me. She has a violent temper. And you're lucky if it's only throwing something at you. Once I saw her kill her own little dog."

"Kill her dog?" Ruth shuddered.

"Yes. She was crazy mad because he tore a lace dress of hers. The little think didn't mean to. She had him in her lap and when he slipped down, his claws caught in the lace."

"And she killed him for that?"

"She had a revolver in her dressing table. She just took it out of the drawer and shot that little thing as he looked up into her eyes. Just as cruel as that. Say, listen—" Bette stopped a minute, took elaborately quiet steps over to the door of the connecting suite, listened carefully.

Bette Talks.

"I thought she might have come up," she said softly. Then crossed back to Ruth. Still, I was pretty sure she was set for half an hour or so. There are some callers downstairs and she likes to pretend her great lady stuff."

"What were you going to say?" Ruth suggested.

"Oh, yes. Don't ever give me away, will you—"

"Of course I won't," Ruth insisted.

"Well, she's done time."

"Done time?"

"Yes. A term in the State penitentiary."

"She's a convict?"

Bette was enjoying the astounding revelation she made. "Yes. You see, my grandmother knew her mother. They were girls together. We all came from the same town, down in Missouri. And she did a turn in the State penitentiary of Missouri for killing her first husband."

Ruth sat back, astounded at the turn events were taking.

"And then she married Uncle Joe?"

Bette nodded. "Yes, about 20 years ago, I guess. None of his folks ever knew about her. He isn't any angel, himself. Everybody said she was the black sheep of the family. But then you ought to know, he's your uncle."

Bette covered the awkward silence. "Say, listen, tell me something, will you? Are you really and truly their niece?"

It could do no harm to tell the truth, Ruth decided. "No. How did you suspect?"

"I didn't exactly suspect. I knew. You see, I knew the real June Bradley."

"You knew her? Is she living?"

"She was a week or 10 days ago."

"Oh." Ruth sat back. It was a relief to hear that. She ventured another question. "Why do you stay with her when she's so unkind?"

Sick Husband.

"I'll tell you why I stay," Bette said, "I've got a couple of little kids. Yes, I'm married. I'm older than I look. And my husband's sick. He's got the T. B. That's why I came back to her the second time."

"You left her once?"

"Yes. But I came back. She pays me well. She gives me a lot of things for him and the children. Well, I'll tell you, when somebody you love is sick, you'll just do anything to help get them well."

"That's true," Ruth was saying. There was little opportunity for further conversatiion with Bette. They heard voices in the corridor. Clara Bradley and her husband were coming to Clara's sitting room.

"I'll go," Bette said hastily, her face pale.

"Please take the tray," Ruth forced her voice into calmness. "I really don't care for any more."

Clara Bradley opened the door then to a room that seemed quite innocent and gave never a hint of the very intimate conversation that had occurred within it.

Ruth was sitting in her easy chair and Bette, silently, as any efficient servant, was clearing away the supper tray.

Mrs. Bradley had recovered her good humor. She could be quite the pleasantest, most cordial person at times—it was hard to believe that she could change in a very twinkling into anger so devastating that the very thought of it unnerved Ruth.

The way Bette made the statement startled Ruth.

"Want to come down and have a game of rummy with Uncle Joe and me?" she asked exactly as though nothing had happened to disturb the harmony between them.

"No, thank you," Ruth said. "I'd like to see Jim if I may."

"I talked to Pascoe just a little while ago. He says he isn't permitting Jim to have any company tonight. He doesn't want to overtire him. You'll have to wait until tomorrow to see him."

Write Letters.

"I'll stay here, then," Ruth decided.

"Better not. It'll be a long evening."

"Thank you. I'll write some letters."

"That would be a good idea," Clara parried, "act exactly as though Uncle Joe would send them for you."

"I will."

Clara paused, her hand on the door. "Better change your mind, June. The evening's long."

"No, thank you."

"Oh, very well." Aunt Clara went out, closed the door behind her. Ruth heard the inevitable turning of the key in the lock.

* * * *

Bette came in the next morning to bring her breakfast. "Better get up," she advised. "I met Pascoe right out here in the corridor. He says Mr. Jim is anxious to see you."

Ruth was out of bed very quickly. She had scarcely closed her eyes in sleep during the night.

She decided to talk to Bette without delay.

"Is Mister Jim better?"

"I'm afraid not, Miss. They say he had a bad night."

"Has the doctor been here?"

"He just left. I'll draw the bath water."

"I'll do it myself," Ruth disappeared into the bath room hurried at her bath.

Coming out a few minutes later, she saw that Bette had placed the food on the table, even laid out some of her clothes for the day.

"Still want that dress, Bette?"

"I sure do." Bette laughed. She was a good looking woman when she felt in a happy mood.

"I want to talk to you," Ruth said. "Very confidently. We mustn't be overheard."

New Plan.

"Wait until around noon," Bette warned. "I'll bring your lunch. The Madame is going down town. I heard her order the car. Mr. Bradley will be reading and Pascoe will be with Mr. Jim. That will be the first safe chance."

All right," Ruth agreed, wildly excited over her new plan.

He's having his own breakfast," Bette reported a few minutes later. And Mr. and Mrs. Bradley are having their breakfast in the dining room."

"What's that? Not guarding me? Why, I could get away from them."

"Very well, then." Nothing could dismay Ruth now. She had made her plan. She had small doubt that she could get Bette to agree with her plan once the real opportunity came.

"Did you see Mister Jim this morning? How does he look?"

"Just grand. The doctor's taken almost all of the bandages off. There's just a little one on his temple. My, he's fine looking, Miss June. I haven't seen him very often the last few years. I really didn't know how handsome he is."

"He is handsome," Ruth agreed. "Tell me, Bette, how are his eyes?"

"The cuts are well. No bandages are over them now."

"Can he see, Bette, anything at all?"

"No, I guess not. Isn't that a pity, Miss June? Isn't that just an awful pity?"

Office Closed To Economize Relief Funds

Welfare Board Merges Southeast Quarters, Cuts Down Staffs.

Tales of Hardships on Increase as Bell Delays Action.

Reduction in the number of district relief offices was begun by the Board of Public Welfare yesterday to cut down administration expenses and save as much as possible for distribution among the poor.

The Southeast district office at 903 Eighth street was closed and administration of its 706 cases transferred to the Southwest district office, to be known hereafter as the South division office. Reduction in personnel has been made from time to time during the last several weeks. Many of those dropped have been transferred to other work.

Mrs. Katherine Burnett, who has been division secretary of the Southwest office, will have charge of the new South office, and Mrs. Winifred L. Clark, supervisor of the Southeast office, has been transferred to the U street district office, replacing Margaret Wallace, who has been named consultant in old-age assistance.

Bell Too Busy to Study Request.

Despite predictions of a growing number of evictions and increasing distress among employables who have been cut off relief because of lack of funds, nothing definite to improve the situation has yet materialized. Daniel W. Bell, director of the budget, has announced that he had not found time to get around to considering the requested $258,000 additional for the current fiscal year and did not know when he would find time. Relief officials are carrying forward on the restricted basis, which became effective April 1.

Stories of distress continued to mount as workers reported stories of applicants' vain pleas for help. A 23-year-old truck driver, his 19-year-old wife and their 3-week-old baby were evicted from their furnished rooms. They have no money to pay rent or buy fod. They are trying to arrange for some one to care for their infant so the mother, too, can try to find a job.

A father, a sick mother and two children under 12 are living in a back room for which the rent is $3 a week. The man, cut off from relief, is unempoyed. The mother pleaded that her children were crying because they were hungry.

Family Facing Starvation.

"The family is facing actual starvation and ultimate eviciton unless something is done immediately to relieve the situation," a relief worker reported. "Unless Mr. W. is fortunate enough to obtain regular employment, the family will be sleeping and begging in the streets."

Another family comprises a father, mother and seven children. The only member old enough and physically able to work is the oldest child, a daughter, 18. Two of the children have heart trouble. Two others have rickets, due to malnutrition. The daughter's wages as a soda clerk are $13 a week.

Relief workers estimate the amount required to care for the family and provide food, rent, the special diets required, gas and electricity, at more than $100 a month.

An unemployed waitress, cut off relief with the employables on April 1, was locked out of her furnished room at 305 C street northwest, where she lived with her four children—June, 8; Herman, 9; Dolores, 11, and Dottie Dare, 14.

On Relief Only a Month.

The waitress had been on relief only a month before she was cut off. She explained that, previous to that, the separation of her husband forced her to go to work at night. Neighbors complained to juvenile authorities that the children were being neglected, and the authorities threatened to take the children away. They gave the waitress the choice of quitting her job and taking care of the children, caring for them with relief payments of $28 every two weeks, or of holding the job and losing her children. She chose the former.

An arrangement is now being made by which the children will be sent to a foster-home, with the mother paying part of the cost and she will look for work. Right now she is staying with a friend at 215 C street northwest. Only three of the children are at the receiving home. Dottie Dare, the oldest, is with the mother.

The Search of the Well and the Welcome Home

Firemen are pictured as they searched a well for 3-year-old Freddy Wilson—who wasn't there.

Well Scoured, But Freddy, 3, Was Elsewhere

Police and Firement Do Well on Hunt, But Soldier Proves the Hero.

From the kiss and clasp Mrs. Bertha Wilson accorded her 3-year-old son, Freddy, yesterday afternoon, it was evident all had not been well.

In fact, Mrs. Wilson was frantic and had policemen and firemen searching the well for Freddy.

The well is 20 feet deep with 6 feet of water at the bottom, so when Freddy disappeared Mrs. Wilson, who lives at 4100 Alabama avenue southeast, first thought of the well.

She called police, who called the fire rescue squad. The searchers arrived and Fireman Charles H. Baumbach was lowered into the well. Freddy wasn't there.

The child had first been missed when Mrs. Wilson, a daughter, Aloha Jean, 4, and Freddy had been in the front yard. The mother and the little girl went into the house, expecting Freddy to follow. Mrs. Wilson went out looking for him and he couldn't be found.

When the well search ended, police started looking in the neighborhood. They were still looking when a soldier came up from Bolling Field to say that Freddy was down there.

It seems Freddy had wandered off, hand in hand with a woman described by police as being very, very intoxicated, and on reaching Bolling Field was rescued by the soldiery. Police took the woman in custody.

William Houston Heads Local Bar Association

William L. Houston, former member of the Board of Education and a Law School was elected president of the Washington Bar Association, last night at the Musolit Club.

Others elected were George A. Parker and Ollie M. Cooper, vice presidents; George W. Peterson, secretary; William A. Lee, corresponding secretary, and Augustus W. Gray, treasurer. Peterson and Lee were re-elected.

Warrenton Is Crowded.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 16.—Bridges out at Harpers Ferry, Point of Rocks, Brunswick and Shepherdstown, causing the State highway department to advise tourists "to go north via Washington," and Route 211, are responsible for a large incease in the tourist trade in Warrenton for the last few days. The hotel, inns and tourist homes have been crowded to capacity with many turned away over the week-end.

Plan to Invade Capital Is Laid To Taxi Firms

Large taxicab concerns from out of town are contemplating entering the taxicab business in Washington because of the proposed limitation on the number of taxicabs here, local taxicab drivers and others have reported to Public Utilities Commission officials.

The large companies would take out numbers of licenses prior to the effective date of the limitation Congress has been asked to place on the number allowed in the city. Their plan would be to take losses on operation of their cabs for such a length of time as it was necessary to freeze smaller independent operators out of the business. They would count on the future limited number to bring back their losses through increased business.

A limit of 2,000 cabs has been proposed by Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Utilities Commission, and approved by the District Commissioners and transmitted to the Senate District Appropriations sub-committee as a part of the plan to improve traffic conditions.

The proposed rider to the annual District supply bill is as follows:

"No part of the appropriations contained in this act shall be used for or in connection with the preparation or issuance of any license for any vehicle for hire to be used as a taxicab, other than those licensed as of the date of approval of this act, nor for services or expenditures of any kind in connection with the assignment or transfer of any taxicab license to another person, until the number of licenses shall be reduced to 2,000 through voluntary surrender of licenses by the licensees or failure to renew licenses on July 1, 1936, or through forfeiture according to law of the right to hold such licenses by licensees."

School Board Defers Action On 'Scholastic'

Action by the Board of Education on Scholastic, national high school weekly, judged unfit last week by a committee of high school principals and department heads, probably will not be taken until after the Sisson bill to repeal the little Red rider is brought up in the House, it was indicated yesterday.

In a letter to Maurice R. Robinson, editor of the magazine, Charles B. Degges, the board secretary, yesterday pointed out that the report of the committee recommending dropping the magazine from local schools has not yet been presented to Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou, and that it will not be brought formally before the Board of Education until their next meeting on April 22, at the earliest.

The rule of the board with all of the reports on textbooks and periodicals that have been submitted has been automatically to let the reports lie over until the subsequent meeting, to permit thorough study by the board members, Degges wrote.

This would mean that a definite decision by the board will not be taken before May 6. The Sisson bill is expected to be called up in the House either Monday or on April 27.

Degges' letter was in reply to a telegram from Robinson requesting permission to appear before the Board of Education to defend his magazine against the charge of the committee that its editorial policy was "too definite." Degges assured Robinson that when the report of the committee is formally presented to the Board of Education this request would be considered.

Whether the board will approve the action of the committee is a matter of some doubt, as several members are known to be favorably disposed toward the magazine.

Symphony's Labor Strife Perils Plans

Is Prepared for Concert Season Following Fund Campaign.

Lack of Accord With Musicians a Danger, Thom Declares.

While reporting that as a result of its recent fund campaign the National Symphony Orchestra Association is prepared financially to give a season of concerts next winter, Corcoran Thom, president, informed members in annual meeting yesterday the association still lacks an agreement with its musicians.

The deadlock between association directors and musicians' union heads persists, he said, and the orchestra's future cannot be certain until negotiations for a contract with the union are settled.

Although not reviewing the association's difficulties with the union specifically, Thom, in his annual report at the meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, said the disagreement was "on matters which your board of directors regards as essential to the maintenance of the artistic standards of the orchestra."

He referred to the union's demand that musicians imported by the orchestra from other cities be denied the opportunity to compete with Washington union members for jobs outside the National Symphony, which gives its musicians a salary only during the concert season. The orchestra association has insisted that these players, brought here to fill positions in the orchestra for which there are no local players, have a right to take whatever jobs they can get.

The orchestra association is also demanding the reinstatement into the union of George Gaul, the symphony's personnel manager. Gaul was expelled recently because he refused to divulge information pertaining to salaries paid certain orchestra members.

"On March 30 the musicians' union wrote that it would not further discuss the open questions above referred to," said Thom. "Then the board of directors of the orchestra association was and remains unanimous in the opinion that these questions are vital and that no contract should be made which does not fairly assure these essentials. There is an apparent deadlock but your board of directors assures you that it will make every effort consistent with its convictions to continue the National Symphony Orchestra without interruption."

Thom said the money raised in the recent sustaining-fund campaign was approximately the amount collected last year. Collected in cash and in pledges to date are $60,875, and another $10,000 is expected in further contributions.

"On this showing the board of directors has decided that there is sufficient financial assurance for next winter's concerts, but not for concerts this summer," Thom said.

Hans Kindler will continue as conductor of the orchestra, according to the president, who paid tribute to the young leader's "experience, skill, patience, incredible energy and, above all, his certain belief in the great future of the National Symphony Orchestra." Kindler organized the symphony five years ago and has been its conductor since.

During the business session the members elected five board members to fill vacancies left by directors whose terms had expired. Later the new board, including the ten holdover members, met to elect new association officers.

Thom was re-elected president and Dr. William McClellan and Walter Bruce Howe were re-elected vice president and secretary, respectively.

Mark Lansburg, prominent business and civic leader in Washington, who has been a patron of the orchestra since it was organized, was elected to the board of directors.

Retirement Of Alligood Is Approved

Police Board Acts to Put Detective Sergeant On Inactive List.

D. C. Commissioners Are Expected to Concur; Record Is Cited.

Retirement of Detective Sergt. Frank M. Alligood was approved by the Police Retiring Board yesterday. Recommendation of the board is expected to be approved by the District Commissioners.

Sergt. Alligood's retirement had been recommended by the Police Trial Board at a recent hearing in which the board acquitted him of serious charges on grounds he was not mentally responsible.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, sent the detective before the trial board following a fracas in which he engaged with his superior officer, Inspector Bernard M. Thompson, chief of the Detective Bureau, in front of the Willard Hotel entrance early in the night of March 7.

Alligood had been assigned to duty at the hotel to guard arrival and departure of President Roosevelt, who was attending the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association. He failed to report at the specified hour. When he reported later and was questioned by Inspector Thompson, Alligood became angered and, during a scuffle in which both fell to the pavement, drew his pistol. Inspector Thompson testified at the trial Alligood did not threaten him. The detective testified he could not remember the incident.

Pleaded to Continue.

Daniel B. Maher, his attorney, introduced testimony before the retiring board yesterday by Dr. Wilbur H. R. Brandenburg, member of the police board of surgeons, that Alligood would have been retired several years ago because of injuries, except that he pleaded so hard to be permitted to continue on active duty. Alligood began his service on the police force 19 years ago. He achieved national notice because he recovered so many stolen automobiles while a member of the automobile squad. The number was said in police circles to be greater than the number recovered by any other individual policeman throughout the country.

In 1920 Alligood was shot in the abdomen while arresting a man charged with a felony. He was cut and stabbed several times in making other arrests. In 1929 he was in an automobile accident and seriously injured. After all illness of several months he was sent to Johns Hopkins Hospital, where it was discovered he had suffered a brain injury. Dr. Brandenburg said the board of surgeons decided to permit him to continue on active duty only so long as he could perform his duties satisfactorily.

Memory Has Been Legend.

Alligood's memory has been a legend in the police department, but when T. Gillespie Walsh, assistant corporation counsel and chairman of the retiring board, asked him the date he was married he could not remember. His record contains 22 citations for bravery and meritorious service. Forty-eight years of age, Sergt. Alligood is married and has one son, Frank M., jr. He resides with his family at 617 Delafield place northwest.

Shirley Temple Party Turned Into 3 Parties

Despite Brief Advance Notice, 800 Throng to Store Event.

After only one day's notice in the newspapers, a pre-birthday party in honor of Shirley Temple at Lansburgh's department store yesterday became three parties when a crowd of more than 800 appeared instead of the expected 250.

At each of the three parties the girl present who most nearly resembled Shirley Temple was presented a Shirley Temple outfit of dress and hat. The little girls awarded the outfits were Claire Benson, 5424 Second street northwest; Barbara N. Shehade, 1713 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and Ione Hofman, 23 Maryland avenue, Hyattsville, Md.

The youngsters were entertained by the Lansburgh clown, a comedy motion picture and magic tricks by Harry Baker. Each child received ice cream and cake, a bag of candy and an autographed picture of Shirley Temple. They also signed a huge telegram of greetings which will be sent to the child actress in time for her birthday next Thursday.

Among the spectators were six children from the Washington Home for Foundlings. About $200, the proceeds from the parties, will go to the home to be used for new playground equipment.

City Troups Study Ruling On 'Lotteries'

Office of U. S. Attorney Besieged by Club, Church Members.

Numerous Organizations Revise Game Plans at Functions.

The fine distinctions between "games of skill" and "games of chance" were studied yesterday by hundreds of church, social and fraternal groups in an effort to learn just what games are to be permitted at carnival and benefit affairs under the latest "lottery" law interpretation of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Many of the lodge brothers, mothers, pastors, legionnaires, debutantes and dowagers consulted dictionaries, while hundreds of others besieged the office of the district attorney with telephone calls.

Most of these had bingo parties or similar functions on schedule in the next few days and the invariable question they asked on being told which were considered to be games in which chance predimonated, was:

"What are we to do?"

Up to Questioners.

"That's up to you" was the usual reply of Assistant District Attorneys Roger Robb and Harry L. Underwood, who answered most of the calls.

Some persons indicated they would defy the ruling but the great majority of those calling seemed resigned to reorganizing their social functions to bar Lady Luck in any form whatsoever, whether as raffles, bingo, punch boards, wheels of fortune or door prize lotteries.

Among the many organizations forced to change their plans were St. Teresa's Roman Catholic Church, which will hold a bingoless social today at 8:30 p. m., for the benefit of the church; the Lebanon Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star, whose party was planned for tomorrow night; the drill team of Bethel, No. 1, Job's Daughters, Thursday; the Naomi Chapter of the Eastern Star, Friday, and the Admiral George Dewey Naval Auxiliary, Tuesday.

Reactions Hostile.

The reaction to Garnett's ruling of the various social groups remained almost uniformly hostile, with indications that a concerted drive for amendment of the lottery law to exempt worthwhile functions is in the offing.

Conferences are being held by the units of the larger church and fraternal organizations.

Several groups are expected to call upon Garnett soon to seek a more liberal interpretation of the lottery law.

Bee-stirred

Citizens Bestir Selves for Apiary Law.

Legislation to control bee-keeping in the District was asked yesterday by Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown.

The request was passed to acting Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West. Brown's action followed complaints from citizens against bees swarming in their gardens, so that they are unable to enjoy them.

The request of the police chief is that legislation be drafted to compel bee-keepers to control their swarms.

Prayer Book Changes 'Gawky,' Pepper Tells St. John's Group

Revisers of the Episcopal Church's Book of Common Prayer were admonished for "gawkiness" last night by former Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, before St. John's Men's Club.

In telling of the evolution of the book, he described as "lacking in beauty of language and spiritual power" the prayers added by the 1928 revisers.

"Growth," Pepper said, "is as wholesome and necessary in language as it is in our bodies, but gawkiness in both cases is to be deplored, and much modern American English is gawky.

"I find traces of this unlovely development in the revision of 1928.

"The changes made in some of the verses in the Psalter, while doubtless the result of more exact rendering of the original, seem to me to have marred in many instances the poetic character of the older translation.

"I cannot forgive the revisers for having omitted from the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians (the lesson in the burial office) that wonderful passage which begins 'I protest by your rejoicings which are in Christ Jesus I die daily,' concluding with the denunciation 'for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame.'"

Pepper spoke of the prayer book as "a document with a pedigree" and declared its "importance is second only to that of the Bible itself."

He likened the work of those who wrote and revised the book to the careful consideration of each clause displayed by the framers of the American Constitution.

Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the Supreme Court, who presided, complimented Pepper on the exhaustive study he devoted to preparing his "most inspirational talk" and urged those present to pattern themselves after the former Senator by "doing every task well."

CRONIN BREAKS THUMB IN TWO PLACES; OUT 3 WEEKS

Yanks Quell Nats' Rally in Ninth to Score 6-5 Victory

Bolton's Blow Turned Into Double Out

Appleton, Bokina Hit Hard as Yanks Get 9 Extra-Base Socks.

Selkirk Gets Home Run, One On; Nats Halted by Walter Brown.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The Nats' tender little two-game winning streak expired yesterday from the killing effects of a ninth-inning double play after being reduced to a weakened state by an overdose of extra-base pitching.

The Yankees, who, with four errors to their discredit, were making a terrific effort to lose after piling up a 5-2 lead, finally accepted victory by the score of 6 to 5 and silenced the 5,000 customers who were making a great to-do over a ninth-inning uprising by the Nats.

Washington appeared in a fair way toward tying the score in that ninth after Shortstop Frank Crosetti failed to come up with Cecil Travis' grounder for a dismal error. And when Umpire Ormsby called Carl Reynolds safe on an attempted sacrifice bunt on which Tony Lazzeri made a great play, the Nats were lucky indeed, inasmuch as Reynolds was plainly out.

The rally sagged a bit when Red Rolfe turned Joe Kuhel's grounder into force-play at second base, but Travis reached third with the tying run, and with only one out the Nats were still in a sweet spot. The customers, who were whooping it up with great enthusiasm, sadly turned their heads a moment later when Cliff Bolton's ground ball was converted into a game-ending double play by Crosetti.

Pitching Is Bad.

The long-held suspicion that the Washington pitching is not the kind calculated to win the pennant was emphatically confirmed out there yesterday when Pete Appleton and Joe Bokina, a pair of rookies, bounced 15 base hits off the Yankee bats with a regularity that had the Nats' outfielders on the verge of fatigue.

The Yanks weren't trifling much with singles. Nine of their socks were for extra bases. One was a homer authored by George Selkirk, three were triples, and no less than five were doubles. The Nats bashed out 14 hits against Johnny Broaca and Walter Brown, but they lacked sufficient authority, with 12 of 'em going only for one base.

It was 2-0 in favor of the Nats in the second inning after a rally induced by the first of two errors by Rolfe, who fumbled Travis' grounder. Singles by Reynolds (the first of his four), Kuhel and Appleton gave the Nats their two runs.

The Yanks came back snorting with five consecutive extra-base hits in the next inning, after two were out. Johnson doubled to right. Selkirk pounded a tremendous homer high into the centerfield bleachers. Gehrig doubled to right, Dickey doubled to center and Chapman tripled to center. Appleton finally stopped 'em by striking out Lazzeri, but the Yanks had a 4-2 lead.

Brown Blanks Nats.

They made it 5-2 in the fourth when Johnson's Texas Leaguer scored Rolfe who had doubled, and then the Nats began to raise a great commotion.

Reynolds singled to center, but was forced by Kuhel. Roy Johnson, however, breathed a large gob of life into the uprisng when he dropped Bolton's easy fly and Pinch Hitter Johnny Stone, maintaining a perfect pinch-hitting average, blasted a triple to center that scored two runs. Jesse Hill doubled to center and the score was tied at 4-4. That blow blasted Broaca from

Bender First (No. 7), answering Jockey Leyland's whip, noses out another 12-to-1 shot, Apathy, in the first race at Havre de Grace yesterday. Infilee (No. 9), a 26-to-1 shot, is seen finishing third with Light Brook, the favorite, fourth.

This Morning . . .
With Shirley Povich.

THAT was a rather nice bow the 1936 edition of the Washington ball club made to the fans of the Capital in those three games with the Yankees. Even the most skeptical are forced to bear with the Nats for the time being, at least. Playing the Yankees to three 1-run margins and winning two of 'em was no mean feat, and that there is talent in Bucky Harris' ball club is rather obvious.

POVICH.

It ought to be pretty apparent now that any time Buck Newsom is out there pitching for Washington the Nats have a terrific bulge. If Newsom isn't by way of being the best pitcher in the American League, he's close to it and an exceedingly comforting asset to Bucky Harris.

That about dismisses everything that can be said in favor of the Washington pitching that has been placed on exhibition thus far. There was a clever bit of relief hurling by Jack Russell that may presage better things for Russell this season, but Harris can take no heart in the performances of Ed Linke, Pete Appleton or Joe Bokina, whose hurling was also on view.

The Nats did struggle through that series with the Yanks without the services of Earl Whitehill, however, and with Whitehill in there might have swept the series. The veteran southpaw, in the light of his sensational work at the end of last season, must still be considered a powerful help to the Nats' staff.

NOTHING happened in those three games to disturb the convictions that the Nats can whale that ball or that they are the fastest team to carry the Griffith banner in years. They beat Lefty Gomez only, 1 to 0, but Gomez was rarely in better form than on opening day, and when they shelled Monte Pearson off the mound in the second game, they beat one of the really good pitchers in the league. And in knocking Johnny Broaca out of there yesterday, the Nats were facing another swell pitcher.

Carl Reynolds, in his traditional spring hitting form, is proving no drawback to the Nats out there in rightfield. Any guy who can keep Johnny Stone on the bench is a powerful asset to the ball club, and, mentioning Stone, reminds us that he is doing middlin' well in his new duties as a pinch-hitter. A double and a triple in the clutch by Stone in both his pinch-hitting appearances has given him a 1.000 percentage and there are signs that, with Reynolds pressing him for his job, he is no longer the sluggish gent he has been accused of being.

The great pre-season to-do concerning Cliff Bolton and the belief that his catching is below big league par is rapidly disappearing in the face of his clever work behind the plate. There is a growing suspicion that the main difficulty with Bolton's catching last year was the fact that there was more stuff on the ball when he threw it back to the pitcher than it had when it started plateward.

IN THREE games, Cecil Travis has not disturbed the belief that he is budding into greatness at his new post at shortstop. That pair of errors he tossed into the proceedings in the opening game were miserable affairs, but can be put down to the high-tension atmosphere in view of the slick performances he has given since. And there are no grounds for belief, either, that Travis isn't the same sweet hitter he has been for two years.

And with all due respect to Ossie Bluege, whose fielding made it possible for the Nats to win those first two games, Bucky Harris' team has been operating without the services of the lad who is supposed to represent the greatest single improvement in the ball club.

One of these days Buddy Lewis is going to break into the Nats' line-up, and, unless Bucky Harris was sadly betrayed by his eyes in the South, Lewis is going to be no less than a sensation. A tolerable fielder, he figures to outhit Bluege by 30 points, not including those important extra-base smashes that rattle off his bat when he connects.

Daily Double Pays $596 At Graw

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 16.—Customers at this race track had a suspicion that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had taken over the mutuel department. Money in sums reaching the telephone number stage were being passed out of the payoff windows all afternoon as the long shots sent the judges to the camera to decide the finishes and sent their backers down under the stands to collect small fortunes.

From a monetary standpoint the feature of the afternoon was provided by the daily double. A new record for the season in Maryland was set by the reward of $596.10 for each and every $2 invested in the chances of the combination of Bender First and Ampersand. In fact, after the little regarded Bender First won the first race, the list of possible winners ranged from $110.70 on Hats Off to $834.50 on Ronfalon.

Some idea of the kind of mutuel prices being awarded can be gathered by the fact that Billy Bee, the feature winner, paid $21.20, the smallest price of the day up to that point. The race was the Sudbrook, but it might go down in turf history as the Confusion Handicap.

Three horses went over the finish line in team fashion and while the judges were waiting for the picture, Jockey Merritt, who rode rather haphazardly on Brown Twig, was called into the stand. The crowd took his appearance as a possible disqualification and even those who had tickets on Good Flavor, a decisive last, gripped the pasteboards

Nats Leave Town, Open With Macks

An eight-day road trip that will carry them into Philadelphia, New York, Boston and back to New York is the schedule of the Nats starting today.

In the first of a two-game series with the Athletics at Shibe Park this afternoon, Manager Bucky Harris will start Jimmy DeShong, who will be making his pitching debut for the Nats.

On Sunday, when the Nats play a one-game series with the Yankees before entraining for Boston, Earl Whitehill will face the Yankees in his first effort of the season.

Promoters Refuse to Name Backers of D. C. 'Garden'

A refusal of two promoters of the Washington Garden, Inc., to reveal the names of persons whom they claim are willing to take up options they hold on land upon which the proposed arena is to be placed, enlivened proceedings of the second day of testimony before the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday.

The corporation is endeavoring to float an issue of 30,000 shares of preferred stock at $25 a share, and 10,000 shares of common stock at $5 a share. The site of the proposed arena, which would feature ice hockey, boxing and wrestling, is a tract of land at Georgia avenue, Taylor and Upshur streets northwest.

Harold M. Majors, president of the corporation, and Graeme T. Smallwood, a director of the company, who described himself as a promoter, refused to reveal the names of their backers on the grounds that it would invite disaster for their venture. Smallwood, it was revealed, would receive 5,000 shares of common stock—if the issue is approved—for his services in promoting the arena.

The names of George Marshall, prominent local sportsman and owner of the Boston Redskins pro football team, and Joe Turner, local boxing promoter, were written into the records, but not actively identified with the corporation. Turner, according to Smallwood, agreed to use the arena for at least two boxing shows monthly, and at one time was inclined to purchase stock in the venture.

Marshall, according to the testimony, did not offer financial aid, but advised the promoters to limit building expenditures to a maximum of $500,000 and to restrict the seating capacity to approximately 8,000.

The appraised value of the site of the proposed arena, which the Government, through Attorney E. Forrest Tancer, contends is too generous, has occupied most of the previous sessions. A steady stream of real estate experts has paraded to the witness stand. The hearing is expected to be concluded today.

Options held by the corporation expire May 1 and, consequently, the corporation's counsel, George Edelin, is just as anxious as the governmental forces to end the hearings and have the findings reported to the full commission.

Cubs Beat Paul Dean In Protested Game, 5-2

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, April 16.—The name of Dean had another black mark, albeit a protested one, against it today. Paul, like Dizzy, who lost the season opener to the Chicago Cubs, weakened in the third game of the series to give the National League champions a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals, 5 to 3.

Manager Frankie Frisch, after an eighth-inning row over an infield fly decision that gave the Cubs their final run, announced the Cardinals would finish the game under protest.

With the bases filled and one out in the Chicago eighth, Augie Galan popped a fly which landed just inside the third-base line. Larry French, on first, dashed for second. While he was being run down, Stanley Hack scored. Umpires ruled Galan out on the infield fly rule and French out in the run-up but permitted Hack's run to count.

Cardinal batters established a two-run advantage for Paul Dean in the second but Charley Grimm's men doubled the score on them in the fifth.

To start, Paul hit Bill Jurges with a pitched ball. When Galan's grounder bounced over Pat Ankenman's head, Jurges scored. Then Billy Herman singled and Chuck Klein was passed to fill the bases.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 16.—Lou Gevinson, a bundle of perpetual motion from the District of Columbia, slugged his way into the semi-final round of the National A. A. U. senior boxing tournament tonight by scoring two decisive victories.

Punching Ray Medlock, of Little Rock, Ark., all over the ring in his first battle, Gevinson, who packs dynamite in both fists, eliminated Troy Bellini, of Cleveland, 1935 national bantamweight champion, in his second start to provide one of the biggest upsets of the fistic tourney.

Bellini, now campaigning as a featherweight, staggered Gevinson with a hard right to the ear in the first round, but the Washington star came back with both fists flying and dropped the Clevelander with a left to the head. Bellini stayed down for three seconds and, after regaining his feet, was dumped again. This time he stayed down for five seconds.

A left and right to the head dropped Bellini for two seconds in the third round and later in the session he went down again for three seconds.

Medlock was easy for the Washington slugger in the first engagement. Gevinson staggered the Arkansas battler with the first punch of the fight and would have scored a knockout had not Medlock retreated throughout the melee.

Practically Nobody Sees Phils Down Bees, 7-5

Philadelphia, April 16 (AP).—The Phillies beat down Boston rallies in the final innings today and won, 7 to 5, before fewer than 500 fans. The Phils had a 7-to-1 lead in the seventh inning.

Johnny Moore started off to victory with a home run with Watkins on base in the first inning. Hal Lee hit a home run for the Bees with two on base in the eighth.

Sox Manager Crippled in Collision

Sox Defeat Athletics, 10-4, in Spite of Star's Injury.

$250,000 Former Nat Injured as He Hits Pinky Higgins.

By the United Press.

Boston, April 16.—Joe Cronin, manager-shortstop who represents one-fourth the actual cash value of the $1,000,000 Boston Red Sox, was lost to the team for at least three weeks today when he suffered a double fracture of the right thumb in a collision with Pinky Higgins, Philadelphia Athletics' third baseman, during the game with the A's.

The accident occurred in the first half of the second inning. Cronin had forced Higgins at second and was about to attempt to complete a double play when he jabbed his hand into Higgins, who was running into the base.

Cronin finished the inning afield, but gave way to Pinch-hitter Johnny Kroner, rookie infielder acquired from the Syracuse club of the International League. Kroner went to third in place of Eric McNair, who took Cronin's place at shortstop for the remainder of the game, which the Red Sox won, 10-4.

At first, it was not believed Cronin had suffered serious injury, but an X-ray revealed the thumb of his right hand was broken at both joints.

Leaves for New York.

After the game, Cronin accompanied the Red Sox to New York, where they open their brief road campaign against the Yankees tomorrow.

The Sox pilot, who was purchased from the Washington Senators in October 1934 for the unprecedented sum of $250,000, said he expected to be back in the line-up in three weeks. Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, club physician, was less optimistic, however. He said it might be a month before Cronin's thumb would be fit.

Toward the close of the 1935 season, while player-manager of the Senators, Cronin had suffered a broken wrist on the same hand.

As a result of Cronin's injury, the Red Sox will present a make-shift line-up against the Yankees tomorrow.

It was indicated that Bill Werber would return to third base from the rightfield berth to which he had been assigned regularly at the opening of the season Tuesday.

Dodgers Drop Third in Row To Giants

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 16.—The New York Giants made it three straight over the Brooklyn Dodgers with a 7 to 6 victory today, a double by Hank Leiber in the ninth driving in the final two runs.

Van Mungo, who lost yesterday's game and was fined $25 for his fight with Dick Bartell, had throttled the Giants' attack after relieving Ed Brandt in the fifth, when the New Yorkers bunched four hits with a walk and a wild pitch to score three runs and tie the score.

With two out in the ninth Burgess

Four Long Shots Win at Graw; Daily Double Returns $596

Feature Race Is Taken by Billy Bee

Daily Double of $596 Sets New Record for Season.

in hope that they might prove valuable by the process of elimination.

The judges finally ordered the numbers hung to indicate that Billy Bee had won, Trumpery was given second money and third honors went to Gallant Mac. The chart makers called it a head and a nose.

The race was a thriller with Trumpery, harassed by Royal Wager, setting the pace with Dancing Doll a prominent figure. In the closing furlong, Billy Bee got into the thick of the battle and Gallant Mac rushed into the contention. It was anybody's race in the final dash for the wire.

The camera was brought into action in the first race to separate Bender First and Apathy, a pair of long shots that bounded to the wire almost as a team. Many believed Apathy, on the inside, had won but the judges, after seeing the pictures, gave the verdict to Bender First. It was a ding-dong race between the pair after they hooked up along the backstretch. First one and then the other was ahead with Infilee third most of the way. Light Brook, the favorite, had trouble at the start and rallied sharply in the stretch but too late to squeeze into the money. J. Leyland rode the winner, which paid a $27.90 mutuel.

Helen Bab, at a $67.10 mutuel gave the talent a jolt in the second race, coming with a stretch rush that disposed of Boocord and Shepherd Boy. The camera again was called upon in the case of the second horse. Mouse Peters gave Helen Bab a million dollar ride after being prominently placed from the start. Chiliad, the public choice, was shuffled back at the start and closed some ground.

Jockey Bobby Merritt made every post a winning one with Ampersand, from the Brandywine Stable, in the third race, to keep up the parade of long shots. The Diapason filly paid a $28.10 mutuel and defeated Snow Fox by a length. Seven Stars closed a big gap from a slow beginning to be third in the field of nine.

The favorite players could hardly believe their eyes when One Chance bounced home with much daylight to spare in the fifth race to pay a mild $5.60 mutuel. Miss Purray was second and Xandra third in the field of six.

The well-played Abbot's Last, from the Vanderbilt farm, finished first in the sixth race, leading Six Bells and Dalmatia to the wire. Les Knapp rode a good race on the winner, having him under restraint until the stretch turn, where he called on the horse for speed and received the answer in a rush that was not to be denied.

The day's program ended with a victory by Thruster, an odds on favorite at a $3.90 mutuel. He galloped all the way and led Palasa to the line. Sun Way was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENDER FIRST, $27.90, $13.60, $9.00; APATHY, $11.40, $7.10; INFILEE, $9.20.

BENDER FIRST, prominent in the early racing, rallied nicely when placed to a hard drive in the last five-sixteenths, moved into a slight lead in the closing furlong and continued stoutly and barely lasted to outstay APATHY. Latter was hurried to the front entering the backstretch, shook off WITTIKIND after six furlongs, saved ground and fought it out willingly under a severe drive. INFILEE improved her position on the outside, made a strong bid midway of the homestretch and held on bravely at the close. LIGHT BROOK was badly messed about in the last quarter-mile and finished full of run. POPO was in tight quarters in the first six furlongs and could not menace. SUN ABBOT tired. WITTIKIND stopped.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:07½. Winner, J. Bishop's b. or br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELEN BAB, $67.10, $23.20, $9.80; BOOCORD, $7.10, $5.10; SHEPHERD BOY, $4.10.

HELEN BAB, eased out of tight quarters while holding a position on the inside until reaching the turn, swung to the outside for the closing drive, finished determinedly and was up in the last strides. BOOCORD had good speed, displaced SHEPHERD BOY, rushed hard from the beginning, saved ground when engaging the pacemaker and held on with good energy under punishment. CHILIAD broke fast and raced close to the leaders all the way. He was racing strongly at the end. SAINTED could not threaten seriously when the final test came. GRACE BUNTING, prominent all during the running, weakened in the last quarter-mile. MISS ALPHONSO went wide all the way. MINNA was never a factor. SILVERY CLOUD was done early. LAST ROMANCE lacked speed and was unable to enter contention.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:37. Winner, Brandywine Stable's b. or br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMPERSAND, $28.10, $11.50, $5.40; SNOW FOX, $5.30, $3.80; SEVEN STAR, $3.90.

AMPERSAND, stoutly ridden to gain command midway of the backstretch, stalled off strong opposition from FIGHT TALK in the first half-mile, opened up a clear lead in the last five-sixteenths, but had to be hard urged approaching the finish to withstand SNOW FOX. Latter, forwardly placed, rallied nicely when put to punishment and was gaining steadily nearing the close. SEVEN STAR, slow to settle in his stride, improved his position readily in the last half-mile and closed full of run on the outside. FIGHT TALK had good speed in the first half-mile, then weakened steadily thereafter. KEARSARGE lacked early speed and was taken wide for the entire journey. MISS TWINKLE was stoutly ridden, but could not reach the leaders. HATS OFF was under strong handling and had no excuses. BONFALON was a trailer all the way. He was worked out a mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLY BEE, $21.20, $8.50, $5.90; TRUMPERY, $9.10, $5.80; GALLANT MAC, $4.00.

BILLY BEE, prominent in the early stages, moved up strongly when reaching the homestretch, responded to severe urging and closed fast to get up in the last few strides. TRUMPERY raced ROYAL WAGER into submission in the first half mile, saved ground entering the homestretch, shook off DANCING DOLL and fought it out resolutely in the closing drive. GALLANT MAC, repeatedly blocked in the first quarter mile, swung to the outside when obtaining racing room in the last five sixteenths and closed fastest of all. DANCING DOLL, in a forward position from the beginning, moved up menacingly midway of the homestretch, but tired suddenly during the final sixteenth. BROWN TWIG suffered interference midway of the backstretch, fell back at the turn and was unable to menace thereafter. BLACK GIFT was caught in tight quarters during the early running and was never a factor. ROYAL WAGER showed good speed for a half mile, then tired.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Wept to post at 4:45. Off at 4:45½. Winner, P. T. Blaisdell's ch. h. (6), by Chance Play—One Hour. Trained by W. R. Flemming. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONE CHANCE, $5.60, $3.80, $2.90; MISS PURRAY, $5.40, $3.70; XANDRA, $3.60.

ONE CHANCE, rated within striking distance for the first six furlongs, moved up readily to take command entering the homestretch, drew clear and came away into a long lead at the end. MISS PURRAY, kept close to the pacemaker after losing command, rallied nicely when shaken up, but was no match for the winner. XANDRA went forwardly from the beginning and held on with good courage to outstay NAVAL CADET. Latter went to his field strongly midway of the backstretch, was taken in hand, then was steered very wide in the last half mile and weakly ridden in the late stages. BUCK LANGHORNE went up on the inside to take command leaving the backstretch, but tired in the last quarter mile. MAR PAL was outrun throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:16½. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ABBOT'S LAST, $6.40, $4.10, $3.60; SIX BELLS, $6.40, $4.70; DALMATIA, $5.20.

ABBOT'S LAST, permitted to settle in his stride before moving into contention, responded gamely when shaken up, circled his field to take command in the closing furlong and was under strong urging to the end. SIX BELLS, worked his way to the outside and closed stoutly in the last half mile. DALMATIA, rated close to the leaders in the first six furlongs, gained nicely when shaken up, but faltered during the closing furlong while under punishment. OVERSTIMULATE closed with a bold rush in the last five-sixteenths. PLAYOFF went prominently for six furlongs, then retired. BRIGHT BIRD was hard ridden to hold a slight lead in the first six furlongs and he weakened when the real test came. HAPPY EASTER was done early. The others were never factors.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:48½. Winner, Miss E. Biller's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THRUSTER, $3.90, $3.10, $2.60; PALASA, $3.60, $3.10; SUN WAY, $5.20.

THRUSTER, away forwardly and having good speed, took command at once, drew out into a clear lead, saved ground throughout and had enough left to hold PALASA safe. The latter moved up threateningly after a half mile, was wearing the winner down through the stretch, but was not good enough. SUN WAY, slow to find his speed, secured room on the inside and closed a good gap. TULEYRIES WAND had nice early speed to force the pace, but tired. SMEAR raced evenly, but could never threaten. The others were never factors.

Cox, Mackenzie Conquer Japanese Pros in Kenwood Match

Victors Card 68 Best Ball To Score

By Dave Herman.

Bucking a terrific head wind all afternoon, and playing remarkable golf considering the conditions, Wiffy Cox, Kenwood professional, and his youthful partner, Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, conquered the colorful Japanese duo of Torchy Toda and Chick Chin yesterday at Kenwood, 1 up, in an exciting 18-hole exhibition match.

With Ambassador Hirosi Saito and members of the Japanese Embassy among the several hundred spectators who braved the 30-mile-an-hour gale, Cox and Mackenzie fired a best ball of 68, two under par, against the Nipponese pros' 70.

The only reason the match didn't end in a tie was because the 115-pound golfing atom that is Torchy Toda missed a 5-footer on the last green by the margin of Chin's nose.

With Mackenzie, Cox and Chin winding up with 5s, little Toda had the chance of his life to qualify as the day's hero. On the green in 2, he rolled his first putt past the hole, and then proceeded to 3-putt—something he hadn't done all day.

Mackenzie Contributes a 70.

Mackenzie, driving and putting beautifully, contributed a 70, after tackling the outgoing nine in an even par 34, which included winning birdies on the fifth and sixth holes.

Cox scored 36-35—71, also having three threes beginning with the fifteenth. Chin shot 34-36—71, and Toda, considerably off form with his approach shots, 36-39—75.

The never-say-die spirit that has made the barnstorming Japanese golfers the big talk in American golf circles was prevalent yesterday. One down as they left the sixth hole, where Mackenzie trundled in a tricky 15-footer for his deuce, Chin and Toda carved out birdie threes on the seventh to balance the scales.

Chin Makes Sensational Shot.

The most sensational shot of the day was provided by the lanky Chin on the ninth. After overshooting the green with his second, Chin played a powerful run-up shot from 50 feet—and the ball finished in the cup for a birdie three. It gave the Japanese a one-up lead at the turn.

Mackenzie's birdie on the sixteenth proved the margin of victory.

Those two long holes, the twelfth and thirteenth, were made in birdie fours by Chin.

Whitehead walked and Mel Ott dropped a single in center. Leiber sent up what appeared to be an easy fly but Freddy Lindstrom and Jimmy Jordan collided trying to make the catch. The ball bounced free for a two-bagger, sending the tying and winning runs home.

Enabling Washington fans to follow the fortunes of the Nats on the road this season, Arch McDonald today begins anew his play-by-play radio broadcasts of Washington's out-of-town games over station WJSV.

When the Nats and the Philadelphia Athletics take the field this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Shibe Park, McDonald will be at his microphone in the People's Drug Store Grill relaying the results of every pitch.

McDonald, the radio voice of The Washington Post sports department, receives directly from the field through the facilities of The Post in co-operation with the People's Drug Store, every happening on the diamond.

McDonald's broadcast is in step with the progress of the ball game, Washington fans hearing developments as speedily as the click-click of the telegraph instrument can tap them out.

On the other end of the wire in every American League ball park will be Shirley Povich, sports editor of The Post, who will transmit the complete report to McDonald.

Bartell, Mungo Fined But $25; Fight 'Not Severe,' Says Frick

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, April 16.—President Ford Frick of the National League served notice today that his non-fraternizing rule for players on the field carries no license to the athletes to swing their fists freely.

He said he fined Shortstop Dick Bartell, of the Giants, and Pitcher Van Mungo, of the Dodgers, only $25 each for a fight they had in Wednesday's New York-Brooklyn game because he considered that fight "not a severe one."

"The fines were the smallest for a fist fight in a good many years but, the non-fraternizing rule had no connection with their size, I made the fines small because I believe there are degrees of fights," he explained.

"That scrap was not premeditated. No one got hurt and no one got a black eye. One fellow just started swinging his fists in the heat of battle because he believed he had been tripped. That's not serious.

"The next fight may be passed by without any fine, or it might bring a $50 fine or a $100 fine, and might also bring about a suspension of the player.

"It all depends on the circumstances.

"If there were a general fight with players rushing off the bench onto the field and starting to swing their fists. That would be a different thing and we would be just as severe as we ever were.

"There absolutely is no connection between the rule against players fraternizing on the field and the small fines given Bartell and Mungo. There just was no occasion for drastic action in their case, which I considered entirely on its merits."

Kann Takes Title On Total of Pins

S. Kann Sons Co. bowling team became champion of the Department Store Bowling League by virtue of total pins, when Woodward & Lothrop tied for the lead by taking the odd game from Lansburghs in a postponed set, the only match scheduled last night.

Losing the pennant was a heartbreaker for Woodwards, for it broke two records, rolling a 648 game and a 1,855 set. The set is an all-time mark for this league.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 16.—The Roosevelt High School's tennis team, of Washington, invaded Baltimore this afternoon and conquered the Forest Park High School squad, 4 to 3. The visitors walked off with the first three single matches, Johnson, Royal and Greenberg being the victors.

Santini's 675 Set Wins Over White

Tony Santini turned in a 675 set to defeat Jack White, New Haven, Conn., ace in a special singles match on the Arcade Alleys last night. Santini averaged better than 130 and inserted a high game of 154 while White's best was 628.

Tonight, White will meet Astor Clarke at the Clarendon alleys and then will pair with Schomberg, a fellow townsman, against Clarke and Paul Harrison in doubles.

Dean Makes Bid in Bout With Raspi on Monday

Eager to outdo his classy stablemate, Cowboy Howard Scott, popular Irish Johnny Dean bids high for main-event favor at Joe Turner's arena Monday night when he boxes Young Raspi, Baltimore's fighting favorite, in scheduled six-round semifinal support of Eddie Mader and Billy Nichy.

Making a clean sweep of his bouts here save for two whirlwind draws with Pete Galiano, and unquestionably the greatest crowd pleaser introduced locally since the peak days of Eddie Burl and LeRoy Dougan, Dean may be given the call over Scott as an opponent for high-ranking Norment Quarles if he punches his way past the red-haired Raspi.

Joe Cox Downs Mazurki in 32 Minutes

Favorite Puts On Usual Rousing Finish at Arena Show.

By George Considine.

Flabbier and funnier than ever before, Kansas City Joe Cox returned to the Turner Tussle Theater last night to body slam Sure Mike Mazurki, former N. Y. U. football star, in the 32-minute feature of the weekly wrestling show. About 1,500 spectators observed the occasion.

It was one of those ordinary rassling matches. You know, the kind where the challenger carries on in great style for a majority of the time. And then in a rousing, ripsnorting, not to mention whirlwind finish, the favorite rallies to score.

After five minutes of unadulterated stalling, Mazurki clamped on a scissors. Cox had his hands full trying to keep scissored while the crowd booed long and loudly. In the mix-up which followed the scissors Referee Bennah Bortnick succeeded in getting himself cornered much to the expressed delight of the customers.

The Whirlwind Finish.

At the half-way mark Cox decided to go to work and kicked Mike off the rostrum with consummate ease. When Mike regained his feet at the ringside, two very embarrassed photographers picked themselves and their equipment up behind him.

Speaking of embarrassment, Kansas City Joe perhaps enjoyed himself quite a bit while lolling in the throes of a cradle split. Another wretched moment was the time Mike fastened his figure-four scissors on the Kansan's muscle-bound chassis.

But how about that whirlwind finish? Well, Mike started a seemingly unending series of body slams. He slammed poor Joey out of the ring and then slammed him back again. Then the capering Kansan rose majestically and slammed Mazurki. Once was enough.

Hall Downs Znoski.

Leering Len Hall employed a French harp, no less, to throw Steve Znoski in 9 minutes. For those interested in technicalities a French harp is a combination buckus and allegazam.

In the opener Scotty McDougall, the senile scientist, lulled one Joe Tonti to repose in 16 minutes.

Central Drops 3-to-1 Contest At Norfolk

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Norfolk, Va., April 16.—Brilliant pitching by George Mathews, a southpaw, won for the Naval Training Station this afternoon from Central High School, 3-1, in the first of a three-game series to be played at the Naval base.

George Rowles was on the mound for the Capital City boys and hurled good ball but for one inning when he gave up a pair of singles and made an error. The Sailors' hurler sent nine Central players to the bench via the strike out method.

The Navy team pushed over its markers in the fourth. Long reached first on McDonough's boot, galloped to second on Gibson's single to center. Konnick attempted to sacrifice and was safe when Rowles threw wild to first, Long scoring. Olive pumped a fly to right to tally Gibson and Konnick raced home on Glisson's single.

Central broke into the run column in the seventh when Joe Feuz received a free trip to first and went to second when Heft was granted a base on balls. Bernie Askins singled sharply to right to send Feuz across the plate.

Stoefen Beats Vines in Net Exhibition

Lott Downs Bell in Thrill-Packed Matches at Maryland U.

By John R. Vosburgh.

College Park, Md., April 16.—For 45 minutes last night erratic Lester Stoefen was probably the world's greatest tennis player. His terrific service, drives and smashes virtually seared the hardwood floor of the University of Maryland's Ritchie Coliseum as he swept the great Ellsworth Vines to a blinding straight-set defeat, 6-2, 6-3.

Only a few hundred fans sat in on one of the fastest matches ever furnished the Washington public. The other matches, in which George Lott defeated Berkeley Bell, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, and Lott and Stoefen outclassed Vines and Bell, 6-3, 6-2, served only to round out a program in which Stoefen's great upset of Vines was the stand-out.

Vines, great kingpin of modern tennis, met his match in the towering Stoefen. Both players were more or less surprised at the turn of events. Vines was not particularly off form. His backhand finally cracked, but only after being subjected to a merciless battering by Stoefen's mile-a-minute drives.

A glassy gymnasium floor served to extenuate stinging drives of the two tall Californians. It was appropriately termed by Bell, a "pane of glass."

Vines took a lead of 2-1 in the first set, but it was his last and only lead. Stoefen was playing at the top of his game. His strokes were working to perfection, and he apparently couldn't miss. He swept to five straight games to finish out the first set.

Making impossible "gets," he turned back Vines' last bid in the second set. After Vines had seen his backhand play false on him time after time when his drives hit the tape, and drop back into court, he stopped the match and measured the net.

Then Stoefen went on to win the next four games, set and match. Vines had a chance to take a 4-3 lead at game point, but Stoefen returned an apparent ace and Vines vollied in the net.

The fans also were thrown into an uproar by the doubles spectacle in which Stoefen was again the shining light. Lott, whose canny net tactics had turned back Bell in the opening match, also bore out his rating as the world's greatest doubles player.

Reds Win First Game From Pittsburgh, 7 to 4

Cincinnati, April 16. (AP).—Long range hitting off Big Jim Weaver brought the Cincinnati Reds their first victory of the year today as they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7 to 4.

After Kiki Cuyler, the first man to face Weaver, cracked out a homer in the first inning, the Reds bunched four blows, including a homer by Ival Goodman, Gorge McQuinn's triple and Bill Myers' double, to score three times in the third.

D. C. Public Links Golfers Organize and Elect Kines

It was organized at a meeting in the clubhouse of East Potomac Park's golf course, and the association immediately applied for a charter and membership in the United States Golf Association.

Thomas Welby Kines, a former sandlot baseball player, now connected with the Government Geodetic Survey, was elected president.

James H. Allen, of the Veteran' Administration, formerly a member of Beaver Dam Country Club was named vice president. Eddie Stolark, well-known public links golfer, was elected treasurer, and Dave Herman, Post golf writer, District representative of the U. S. G. A. public links committee, secretary.

Mel Shorey, East Potomac professional; Ed Burns, Rock Creek manager, and Harold Bowers, West Potomac manager, were named on the advisory board, with Shorey as chairman.

Kines, the first president, has been identified with public links golf ever since the East Potomac course was built some 15 years ago.

Another meeting will be held at East Potomac Tuesday, April 28, at which time some 100 public links players will be elected members.

Among others who attended last night's session were J. C. Bibb, Charlie Williams, T. J. Gibraski, Vernon Kanable, Bill Dunham, R. E. Bair, Jim Sweatte and Bob Wolff.

Formation of the District Public Links Association and recognition by the U. S. G. A., it was pointed out, means that the municipal members will be eligible for National Amateur, National Public Links and National Open championships. Scotty Campbell, of Seattle, and Frank Strafaci, of Brooklyn, latter National Municipal champion, are among the public links stars who have participated in National Amateur events.

A regular schedule of tournaments for the season will be drawn up, by-laws and constitution adopted at the April 28 meeting.

Although Anacostia did not have a representative at last night's meeting, that course will be well represented in the association.

Hoyas Defeat Guilford, 5-3, On Errors

By the Associated Press.

Greensboro, N. C., April 16.—Taking advantage of two costly errors and a hit, the Georgetown University baseball club garnered two runs in the sixth inning to score a 5-to-3 victory over Guilford College on the Greensboro Stadium diamond here this afternoon.

Swaim, Quaker hurler, exhibited a fine brand of twirling, keeping his hits well scattered and allowing the visitors only three earned runs. Errors accounted for one run in the fifth, and errors coupled with a hit allowed two more runs in the sixth. After giving up two more bingles in the sixth, his toughest spot, Swaim retired the side.

Georgetown's hurler, Nolan, was meanwhile turning in a fine record, allowing only seven hits in 7 2-3 innings until he was knocked out of the box with Boyles and Kyle sending in runs. Nicketakis relieved him in the eighth with one man on third and retired the side in order, and finished the game without yielding a safety.

Georgetown opened the scoring in the third with Sheeran's homer into centerfield just over Capella's head.

Another Georgetown score was added in the ninth with a hit by Sheeran, a base on balls, a hit by Bassin and a long fly by Cavadine letting Sheeran scamper home.

Hufty Defeated By Davidson At Springs

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 16.—Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, and Jack Davison, of Long Meadow, Mass., will fight it out tomorrow for the championship of the 1936 Mason-Dixon golf tournament.

The Middle Western star, former National Open titleholder, eliminated A. M. McNair, of London, 4 and 4, and Davison turned back Page Hufty, of Washington, 3 and 2, in the semifinal matches.

Goodman made it three up at the 537-yard, par five, twelfth, taking a four. They halved the thirteenth with par fours, but Goodman caged a birdie three on the fourteenth to McNair's four. This made Goodman four up and the match ended on the fifteenth, where they halved par threes.

Hufty, the former North-South champion, was one down to his opponent at the half-way mark. Davison won the eleventh to go two up, Hufty won the twelfth, and Davison came back to win the fourteenth with a par four. Both took par three's on the fifteenth, and Davis ended the match on the next hole with a par four while Hufty was taking a five.

Oliveri to Face Wilhelm for Golf Title

Victors Clash for Rock Creek Spring Crown This Morning.

Andy (Chubby) Oliveri, Roosevelt High School golf star, and Bill Wilhelm, seasoned municipal golfer, will clash this morning in the finals of the Rock Creek Spring championship.

Oliveri had to call on some of his finest golf shots yesterday over the wind-swept, hilly public links course to eliminate the co-sharer of the medal, W. W. Seay, 2 and 1.

Even at the turn, Oliveri won the seventeenth to salt away the verdict.

Wilhelm and Leapley also reached the tenth even, and from that point on waged a furious, ding-dong match.

Leapley's finish was tragic. Both he and Wilhelm were on the green in two, but Leapley's putter rebelled in his hour of need, and he three-putted, losing with a five to a par four.

Bob Morris defeated Paul Reed, 5 and 3, and Julian Williams won from R. E. Greene, 2 up in the second flight semifinals. Byron Baer trimmed J. Walker, 3 and 2, and L. D. Byers took J. Kirchmeyer, 2 and 1 in the third flight semifinals.

Brown, Haynes' Record—Ho Hum

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 16.—The status of LeRoy Haynes, the new Negro heavyweight sensation, today had been greatly bolstered in the hinterlands by his "knockout" of Natie Brown as patient Philadelphia fight fans who witnessed last night's performance shrugged indifferently.

Haynes will be shipped to New York to capitalize on his record of having knocked out several fighters who fell victim to Joe Louis in quicker time than did the Brown Bomber, and on the fact that he was able to stop in two rounds the man who went the distance with Louis.

LeRoy probably will draw as the first of the three opponents he has agreed to fight in Ebbets Field for Promoter Andy Neiderreiter, none other than Primo Carnera, whom he knocked out in three rounds in Philadelphia a short while ago.

The other two opponents will be picked with equal care, with an eye to protecting Haynes' future earning possibilities, and then LeRoy probably will be brought back to Philadelphia for a bout or two, after the trusting customers have forgotten about last night's affair.

Al Ettore, with two victories over Haynes to his credit, or Tommy Loughran, the Philadelphia dancing master, may draw the assignment there if suitable arrangements can be made.

The fistic firm of Taylor and Gunnis, of course, will promote all of Haynes' future bouts in the City of Brotherly Love, while the Neiderreiter group, closely allied to the T. and G. faction, will conduct the business in New York.

It is the general opinion of those who saw Brown in action when in real physical condition that the former District heavyweight champion would have handled Haynes with the greatest of ease last night had he been anywhere near fighting fettle. As it was, many are inclined to believe he could have lasted the distance, even winning the decision, had it been thus ordained.

So-called "boxing experts" were in a quandary here today, trying to decide upon a punch to which the knockout of Brown could officially be

They rose .8 per cent from February to March, which made them 10 per cent higher than a year ago and 19.1 per cent higher than in January, 1934. The rent level of March, 1936, however, was 18.8 per cent below that of March, 1929.

While women's clothing prices fell .4 per cent from February to March, men's clothing prices rose slightly, .1 per cent. Clothing prices as a whole averaged .1 per cent lower in March than in February, 2.6 per cent lower than a year ago, and 24.2 per cent lower than in March, 1929, but 21.9 per cent higher than in April, 1933.

Butter Price Slumps 4 Cents a Pound

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—In one of the sharpest breaks on record, butter prices on the Chicago cash market dropped more than four cents a pound today.

Butter "extras" fell 4¼ cents to 29 cents, which completely wiped out the advance scored since the first of the month. A few scattered sales were made at this level but business was slow. Other grades were off as much as 4½ cents. Some traders asserted the decline in price was to some extent anticipatory of an expected sharp increase in production and supply.

The April 1 United States supply of butter was the lightest for the date in eight years. Stocks totaled only 5,291,000 pounds.

Stocks Drift Irregularly Lower in Less Active Trading; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, April 16.—Stocks and bonds were irregular and rather inactive. Government issues maintained a firm tone. Trading in stocks was the smallest of the month, being only a little above a million shares, and prices suffered more from lack of trading interest than pressure to sell. Closing deals were near the poorest of the day, with majority of issues showing losses. May wheat lost a quarter of a cent at 97⅞ cents a bushel.

Stock groups were as mixed in price as were individual issues. New high prices were reached by American Chain, Checker Cab, Commercial Credit, Indian Refining, Sears Roebuck, Sloss Sheffield, common and preferred, Youngstown Sheet, American Crystal Sugar and Cuban American Sugar.

On the opposite side, the thin markets brought sharp declines on small offerings for Archer Daniels, Brown Shoe, Colorado & Southern 2d preferred, Engineers Public Service $6 preferred, International Business Machines, Laclede Gas, Gulf Coast Lines, Ruberoid, Texas & Pacific and Wheeling Steel preferred. Other stocks under pressure were A. O. Smith, American Agricultural Chemical, U S. Industrial Alcohol and Waukesha Motor, the bunch falling 2 to 4 ponits.

Rails were irregular in a narrow range, as were the public utilities. Pacific Gas was buoyant. Motor stocks were barely steady. Metals were a trifle harder. Can and Manville moved forward. Buying of Corn Products slackened a little.

Interest in France.

With publication today of the Bank of France weekly statement the guessing on devaluation of the franc doubtless will be renewed. The bank shows another large decline in gold, the loss amounting to 945,000,000 francs ($62,653,000), although no export movement of metal has been noted. That indicates simply earmarking operations, probably for the British stabilization fund, which has been selling sterling to buy francs, and using the French money to obtain gold. Discounts at the bank rose 236,000,000 francs, showing some slackening in the rate of government borrowing at the bank, it is presumed, from the rapid pace of a week or so ago. Circulation meanwhile fell 740,000,000 francs, probably in part a washout of the month-end increase.

The Bank of France's figures brought no increase in activity in the foreign exchange market, which remained remarkably motionless. In any event, no action on the franc is expected until after the end of the month elections, and admitting the overvaluation of the currency, the betting for devaluation is none too confident, as all shades of political opinion in France are reported to be against an "attack" on the franc. In France organizations for the defense of the franc have been formed.

Credit Rumor.

The Bank of France appeared today in the exchange markets as a seller of sterling, instead of the British control authorities, giving rise to reports, subsequently denied, that France had obtained the 1,000,000,000 franc credit in Holland, had transferred the guilders into pounds and was supporting francs at the level necessary to keep gold from coming to New York. Such support, necessarily, meant losses of huge amounts of gold through earmark channels to Britain.

Foreign exchange men in the banks here declared that the virtual cessation of the increase in Bank of France discounts, in the bank statement published today, together with a contraction in circulation, was encouraging, but they refused to take an optimistic view of the statement as a whole because of the huge loss of reserves which it disclosed. The Dutch credit, even if granted, at the recent rate of gold loss would serve to support the franc only week, as the matter is viewed locally, and therefore the Dutch negotiations are not a major market influence.

Without Merit.

That sort of reasoning looks particularly weak, inasmuch as the yearly earnings basis which traders use to guide them in the purchase of stocks is that of the company's fiscal year. That necessarily is so, for the price to earnings ratio of stock prices derives its juice from the dividend expectation, and directors always use the fiscal year as their guide in voting dividends. Moreover, as the case of Westinghouse well shows, a 12 months' report rendered quarterly is of little use in estimating the fiscal year's earnings. For example, Westinghouse in the 12 months ended March 31 earned 200 per cent more profit than in the corresponding period of 1935, but would anyone assume then that the 1936 calendar and fiscal year profits, on which dividends and price earnings ratios are calculated, will be 200 per cent ahead of 1935? What the trader is more likely to do is to find the three months — January-March — profits and compare them with last year. They turn out to have increased about 60 per cent. The trader then, if he thinks the current rate of increase is likely to hold throughout the year, arrives at his estimate of 1936 earnings by adding 60 per cent to last year's earnings.

Nothing Gained.

That gives all the consideration to seasonal influences—as, for example, a slack summer—as possibly could be had from the twelve months' reporting system, and makes sense besides. Naturally the trader has no way of knowing what sort of business the company may do in the closing quarter, but he knows from a study of past quarterly reports what proportion of the year's earnings the fourth, third and second quarters usually bring. Such calculations are familiar to railroad analysts, who have the advantage of regular monthly reports, as should certainly be required also of any company with stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Nothing useful is to be gained from the twelve months' statement, and something may be concealed even from the analyst who has the time to reconstruct proper quarterly statements.

Local Clearings Gain Against Average Drop

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $22,218,751.45 for the week ended April 15, which compares with $19,557,032.15 for the same period last year, an increase of 13.6 per cent. Compared with $27,783,821.26 for the previous week, clearings decreased 20.02 per cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 16.—For the first time in 12 weeks, or since January 15, bank clearings failed to reach the aggregate of the comparative period of the year preceding.

The total for 22 leading cities in the United States for the week ended Wedensday, April 15, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., was $5,072,985,000, as against $5,321,213,000 for the same week of last year, a decline of 4.7 per cent.

The cities in which declines from last year were evidenced were Boston, Philadelphia, Richmond, Atlanta, Minneapolis, Kansas City, San Francisco and New York. The largest gain, one of 47.5 per cent, appeared at Pittsburgh.

Dayton, Ohio, April 16 (AP).—The Curtiss Airplane & Motor Corporation, of Buffalo, was a bidder on various quantities of a single place, monoplane pursuit plane to be purchased by the Army Air Corps when bids of four manufacturers were opened here yesterday.

Curtiss offered its plane for $29,412 if 25 are purchased and for lesser amounts in greater quantities up to 200, on which the price would be $14,150 each.

Chance Vought Corporation, Hartford, Conn., submitted a bid of $34,148 each on an order of 25 and $16,051 each on 200. Seversky Aircraft Corporation, of Farmingdale, Ill., bid $34,900 for each on an order of 25 and $15,800 each on 200. Leading foreign currencies were a trifle higher in terms of the dollar in most exchange centers yesterday.

In New York the pound sterling advanced ½ of a cent to $4.94¼, French francs were .00⅛ of a cent higher at 6.59⅜ cents, and the Italian lira advanced .01 of a cent to 7.91 cents.

Earlier in London the dollar was unchanged at 4.94¼ to the pound, and in Paris the American unit was a shade lower at 6.59 cents.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 16 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture).—A little early shorn Ohio and similar fleece wools were sold in Boston. Strictly combing ⅜ and ¼-blood grades brought 35 cents in the grease on actual spot transactions involving limited quantities. Other Boston houses were inclined to hold out for 36-37 cents in the grease as the prices at which they were willing to contract to deliver later shorn fleeces of these grades in Boston. A few houses were asking 38 cents for new strictly combing ⅜-blood and 37 cents for ¼-blood, but no demand was reported for these lots.

Member Balances Gain $172,000,000 During Past Week.

By the Associated Press.

Yesterday's weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks disclosed a transfer of Government funds from reserve banks to commercial institutions, causing another sharp rise in member bank reserve balances during the week ended April 15.

Total balances rose $172,000,000 during the week to a total of $5,333,000,000, which the board estimated to be about $2,550,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

Treasury cash amounting to $128,000,000 was taken from reserve banks during the period, during which there also was a return of $29,000,000 of money in circulation.

The addition of $10,000,000 in gold during the week raised the stocks to an even $10,200,000,000, another high peak.

8 Hoe Directors Face Ouster Suits

New York, April 16 (AP).—Samuel Zirn, attorney and chairman of an independent R. Hoe & Co., Inc., stockholders' committee, said today, "we are going to start suit to oust the eight directors who were illegally elected by the management proxy committee." The board of the printing-press company was elected at midnight last night after two 14-hour sessions Tuesday and Wednesday.

Throughout the meetings Zirn had opposed the management headed by Fred L. McCarty, president. Zirn said his group was opposed to McCarty on the grounds the latter lacked experience in the printing press business. "The management is controlled by a very powerful bankers' group headed by the Guaranty Trust Co.," he declared. "We have been fighting them for four years."

E. A. Potter, jr., vice president of the Guaranty Trust Co. and a former director of R. Hoe & Co., Inc., denied that the Guaranty Trust had any interest in the company.

"We have no representatives in the company in any way and haven't had in several years," he said.

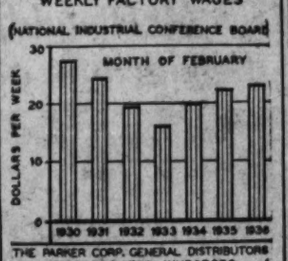
Wages Rise Faster Than Living Costs



Boston, Mass., April 16.—Factory wages, covering 25 industries, maintained an upward trend since 1933. They averaged about 4 per cent above a year ago, and were 42 per cent greater than in February, 1933. In this same three years the cost of living of wage earners went up only 17 per cent, thus purchasing power has greatly increased.

Striking Pupils Besiege Eight Rural Schools

Parents Join in Protest as 12 Teachers Are Ousted; Board Adamant.

By the Associated Press.

Hazleton, Pa., April 16.—Parading youngsters of Hazle Township, reinforced by men and women, laid a noisy siege to eight schools today and called for marches on seven more tomorrow.

Working toward a goal of shutting down every one of the 21 schools in the district in protest against the dismissal of 12 teachers, strike leaders claimed 10 buildings had been forced to abandon classes.

Township officials disputed the success of the picketing, contending only two buildings were closed They said the marching pickets were turned back at three schools and that the others continued classes with attendance ranging from 20 to 50 per cent.

The "wash boiler" band of yesterday's marches was missing, but the pickets had another band playing a lusty accompaniment to their tramping. Observers estimated more than 200 children, aided by men and women, were in the parade that marched on the Lattimer, No. 1, Building, alone. Groups of approximately the same size paraded about the other buildings on the picket list.

The taxpayers, meanwhile, rebuffed last night when the board did not act on a petition to reinstate the ousted instructors, called a meeting for tomorrow afternoon at the Latimer Baseball Park. Leaders said they would seek to institute ouster proceedings against the four Republican directors who outvoted three Democratic members on the motion to terminate the 12 contracts.

The school board, standing pat, said the absent children were being listed as truants, indicating that the parents under the State code might be prosecuted if the pupils were absent more than three consecutive days. The strike started Tuesday at the Lattimer No. 2 and Ebervale No. 3 schools, the building which directors listed today as closed.

Jacob Gettinger, president of the board, said dismissals have been ordered elsewhere and that the board was within its rights.

Students Strike.

Leaf River, Ill., April 16 (AP).—Because the school board voted 3 to 2 last night to dismiss Principal Stanley Finifrock at the end of the term because "he was spending too much money," this village of 400 inhabitants saw these things happen today:

The entire student body of 100 went on strike and paraded through the streets.

All teachers and the two dissenting school board members announced they would resign if Finifrock is not retained.

Razor Firm Scores Test Suit by U. S.

New York, April 16 (AP).—Charged with violating the Clayton anti-trust act, the American Safety Razor Corporation contended at a hearing today that it had been selected by the Government as "the guinea pig for an exploratory experimentation."

As the hearing on charges of using unfair practices to defeat competition through price cutting and distribution of free merchandise to jobbers and dealers, opened before Examiner Edward M. Averill, of the Federal Trade Commission, the corporation's counsel, Felix Levy said:

"What this company has been doing is sound, ethical and of the highest type of enterprise used by thousands of small concerns which have risen to become large corporations and have made America a world leader in industry."

The corporation, with headquarters in Brooklyn, was incorporated in Richmond, Va., in 1919, and maintains branch offices in Chicago, Detroit, Boston and London, England.

Arrested 203 Times.

New Haven, Conn. (U.P.).—An all-time record has been established in city court by Clarence Niver, 58, who appeared on a drunkenness charge for the 203rd time. Judgment was suspended as Niver's card was bereft of space in which to enter a jail sentence. "Thank you, judge," he exclaimed.

English 'Quintuplets' Arouse Fleet Street

London, April 16 (AP).—A private telegram from Southend caused a flurry of excitment in Fleet Street, London's newspaper row, today.

"Betty gave birth to quintuplets, four girls, one boy; all doing well," it said. The message, from Mrs. Pirrie's maternity home at Southend, became noised abroad.

A hurry telephone call from Fleet Street brought the answer that the information was correct. But details were refused.

Local newspapermen eventually discovered that the "quintuplets" were the offspring of an Alsatian dog.

Laundry Equipment Installed at D. C. Jail

Installation of laundry equipment was started this week at the District Jail, replacing equipment which had been in use for 35 years.

In the past year, inmates handled 289,000 pieces of work with their antique equipment. The new machinery will cost approximately $7,500.

Insurance Agents Lose Jobless Aid

A ruling by Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, excluding insurance agents who work on commission from provisions of the District unemployment compensation law was approved by the Compensation Board at a meeting in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday.

The ruling will mean employes will receive no benefits from the law and their employing companies will not have to pay the employer's tax prescribed in the law.

Approval of the Seal opinion had been expected, inasmuch as Seal has been the only person considered for appointment as counsel of the board, a position to which he was recommended by John A. Marshall, unemployment compensation commissioner, who formerly was superintendent of insurance. Seal's appointment as board counsel is being held up, it is said, pending selection of a corporation counsel to succeed E. Barrett Prettyman, who resigned, effective March 31, to enter private law practice. Seal is an active candidate for the post of corporation counsel.

Engineering Awards.

New York, April 16 (AP).—The engineering-news record stated today that private engineering construction awards totalled $54,756,000 during the week ended April 14, compared with $26,087,000 in the same week last year.

France to Seek Delay for Italy In Peace Talks

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 16.—France will demand that Italy be given additional time to "consider" fresh proposals for peace in East Africa after the Ethiopian refusal to accept the preliminary Fascist plan, official sources said tonight.

The French stand, the officials said, called for the same treatment toward Italy as Great Britain accorded Germany after Reichsfuehrer Hitler rejected the London Locarno suggestions.

They declared that inasmuch as England had then given Germany "plenty of time," the League of Nations should give Italy the same treatment.

To Resist Haste.

Any British efforts to call a "hasty" meeting of the League Sanctions Committee will be resisted by the French representatives at Geneva, these sources said.

While the French awaited clarification of the tangled Italo-Ethiopian conciliation efforts, Maj. Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of the army general staff, was conducting a personal inspection of northern and eastern defenses.

He centered his activities in Strasbourg and made plans to study fortifications at Colmar and Mulhouse tomorrow.

Seek Italian Support.

Anxious for Italian support in their controversy with Adolf Hitler, the French apparently supported their previous attitude that war sanctions against the Fascist nation should not be intensified until the peace conversations at Geneva had proved an actual failure.

As their position is contrary to the expressed desires of Great Britain (which seeks peace or new penalties against Premier Mussolini), fear arose in some quarters England might dissolve its support of France in the Franco-German dispute in the Rhineland.

Some high sources predicted that a final Italian victory in the capture of Emperor Haile Selassie's capital city could only be prevented by military sanctions which would "shift the war from Africa to Europe."

MacVeagh Appeals 'Cold-Love' Balm

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—A claim of love turned cold, while $250 a month payments went on, was made today in a brief filed in the appeal of James MacVeagh, 60, and socially prominent, from the court order to pay $2,500 arrears on a life contract with Louise Hagen, 47, New York artist who bore a son by MacVeagh in 1911.

MacVeagh, son of a pioneer Chicago wholesale grocer and Secretary of the Treasury under President Taft, is now in Washington as an official of the Federal Housing Administration.

James J. Barbour, counsel for MacVeagh, whose wealth once was estimated at $3,000,000 but who says he no longer can finance Miss Hagen's art studies, contended his client never had any intention to marry Miss Hagen. He produced letters written over a 20-year period to support the contention.

This was called a "smoke screen to hide the real purpose of the contract" in a reply brief filed by Miss Hagen's attorney, Herbert R. Stoffels. It added, "the object was to preclude a suit against the defendant based on his breach of promise to marry."

The contract was executed January 18, 1930, a few days after MacVeagh married Zelle Barthelmy, daughter of the former French consul general here.

Senators to Vote Today On Ritter Impeachment

Under a prior agreement, votes on the seven articles of impeachment will be taken soon after convening at noon today.

Border Dispute Ended.

Geneva, April 16 (AP).—The Dominican Repubic notified the League of Nations today that it had exchanged instruments of ratification of a frontier agreement with Haiti, ending a long-standing border dispute. The Dominican government characterized the occasion as "a day of American brotherhood."

Italy's Terms Rejected

the conferences and thus keep the peace talks "within the framework of the League."

The British interpretation of the Italian position was that the Italians "will not negotiate through the League, will not submit their peace terms to the league, will not talk peace in Geneva and will not cease fighting."

"What the League wants is a fair and reasonable peace," said one, regardless of whether the negotiations are direct or three-cornered."

It was pointed out that the Chaco peace was finally negotiated in Buenos Aires by American nations and that the League was glad to see such an achievement.

Italy was said to demand that negotiations for a military armistice be conducted as between victor and vanquished, possibly to be followed by a peace conference at some neutral point outside Geneva, such as Lausanne.

Premier Mussolini, it was said, would ask guarantees of Italian security from Ethipoian bands in case negotiations would begin.

Great Britain and France, which signed a treaty in 1906 with Italy dividing zones of influence in Ethiopia, would be invited to send delegates to the projected peace conference.

Ethiopian Rule Mapped.

Rome, April 16 (AP).—Drafts of Italian methods for governing "conquered Ethiopia" are already on paper and are being studied by the ministry of colonies, informed sources said tonight.

An outline of these drafts was said to be:

1. As soon as Addis Ababa is reached Italian dominion over Ethiopia will be formally established.

2. The Ethiopian dynasty under Emperor Haile Selassie will be dispossessed.

3. The Italian military command will organize the country by (a) dividing the conquered territory according to racial characteristics; (b) setting up various chieftains and members of the nobility as civil leaders in the different zones; (c) proclaiming civil and religious liberty throughout Ethiopia; (d) organizing a mercenary native army under Italian officers; (e) organizing colonial police under Italian carabinieri.

4. During the preliminary organizing stages the Italian policy will be to assure an Italian economic and commercial monopoly in Ethiopia, but when the country is organized the open-door policy will be maintained.

5. During the entire course of organizing the new country, British and French rights, stipulated in the treaty of 1906 with Italy, will be recognized and will not be molested.

The three Locarno Treaty members' staff conversations were terminated tonight with no announcement. Surprised at their brevity, observers believed nothing very substantial was worked out in the two-day sessions.

The diplomatic situation was obscure, pending clarification from Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, now in Geneva. Most officials are absent from London because of holidays but are keeping in touch with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin.

the parliamentary debate which won the vote of confidence for the newly installed Leftist administration.

Azana declared the present financial position of Spain was "the fault of the Rightists, who created a situation of panic by withdrawing 500,000,000 pesetas from circulation after the Leftist election."

The premier urged the Left united front to maintain its solidarity "to enable the government to carry out its republican policies."

Calvo Sotelo, in reply, charged the administration with permitting the "sovietification of Spain." His allegation threw the chamber into confusion as Sotelo brought a discussion of the new outbrust into his speech.

"The Extremists have no respect for established authority," he charged.

A Communst deputy interrupted to shout the shooting had been done by Fascists.

After appeals for the government to "recognize its responsibility to bring an end to the state of civil war existing in Spain," the chamber moved to a vote and the government's position was sustained.

U. S. Girl Divorces Chinese Husband

Columbus, Ohio, April 16 (AP).—An East-West romance that bloomed in a Columbus 10-cent store ended today when the court of domestic relations granted Mrs. Viola Brown Lin an uncontested divorce from James Lin, foster son of China's President.

Judge Clayton W. Rose restored Mrs. Lin's maiden name and approved a property settlement which was not disclosed, but which court attaches said gave the American girl between $3,000 and 4,000.

In brief testimony Mrs. Lin told of her elopement with Lin last July 14 when he was an Ohio State University student and she was a dime store hardware counter clerk.

She said Lin returned to China September 9 and had no intention of living with her again.

Mrs. Lin's divorce suit had been pending since December 2, shortly after dispatches from China disclosed that Lin had a Chinese wife, of whom the American Mrs. Lin professed to know nothing.

Legal technicalities in obtaining service on the Chinese delayed the case a number of weeks.

President Roosevelt explained in a letter read last night that he was unable to attend the membership drive banquet of the Colored National Democratic League, held at the Capital Pleasure Association headquarters.

"Although I cannot be with you in person," he said, "I should like at this time to express my appreciation of the support which the National Colored Democratic League is giving to the Administration. With all good wishes that the banquet will be the great success which the loyalty and aggressive spirit of your organizaton deserves."

Charles M. Thomas, master of ceremonies, was introduced by Dr. F. O. Williston, and presented as speakers Emory B. Smith, Paul Best, L. O. Robertson, the District national committeeman, John F. Rescue Work Sped For 3 in Gold Mine

Moose River, Nova Scotia, April 16 (AP).—The fate of three Toronto men imprisoned since Sunday in the damp depths of an abandoned gold mine was a "matter of guesswork," miners said tonight as they blasted and drilled through solid rock in a rescue effort.

As echoes of the blasts rolled across the rocky wastes of what was once an active mining district, other crews pressed on with their diamond drilling, hoping to make a narrow opening through which food and water might be lowered to the entombed trio—Dr. D. E. Robertson, Herman R. Magill and Alfred Scadding.

Twenty feet from the channel the miners were drilling, work continued on a shaft through which it is hoped men can be lowered to the 141-foot level where the doctor and his companions were trapped by a sudden rockfall while inspecting their newly acquired property.

President of Union Charges Espionage

By the Associated Press.

Emil Rieve, president of the Hosiery Workers Federation, told a Senate Labor sub-committee yesterday his union was loaded with labor spies.

Reports on every local meeting, Rieve said, went to the employers through private detective agencies.

Asked by Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, how he knew this, Rieve replied the union had been forced to "fight fire with fire"—to hire spies of its own to spy on the spies.

John Edelman, the union's research director, said he had encountered labor espionage throughout his career with the union, since 1926.

Private detective agencies, he said, had been used to work against the union in Berks County, Pa., for many years.

The witness concluded his testimony by saying "two carloads of thugs" were following each delivery truck of the John Wanamaker Department Store in Philadelphia this week to "protect" deliveries as a result of a strike. Many of these "guards" had criminal records, he said.

Catholics Oppose Teachers' Oaths

New York, April 16 (AP).—Opposition to the assumption by the Federal Government of any authority over education and compelling teachers to take oath of allegiance was voiced today by the Catholic Education Association.

In the closing session of its thirty-third annual meeting the association expressed its stand on both subjects in a resolution which was unanimously adopted.

The resolution described as a "step in a dangerous direction," laws to force teachers to take oaths of allegiance to the Government, asserting that "the logical eventuality will be State monopoly of schools and an education based on political indoctrination."
